Pueblo Crisis Calls Reservists to Duty

WASHINGTON (AP) - On orders of President Johnson, responding to the crisis created by the North Korean capture of the USS Pueblo, the Pentagon today ordered 14,600 reserve airmen to report for active duty immediately.

The total includes 14,00 Air Force and Air National Guard reservists and 600 Navy air reservists.

They could be held on duty for as long as two years.

A White House official raised the possibility of mobilizing some ground troops also, but Army officials said they had received no indications that an Army National Guard or Army ground reserve units would be called to active duty.

How long it will take the air reservists; units to be combat ready was not immediately determined.

The news of the call-up came as another possibility also was speculated on: that some move might be made through the United Nations to recover the Pueblo and the 83 Americans aboard.

The call-up was the first of its sort since October 1962 when 14,000 Air Force reservists were summoned for a show of force during the Cuban missile crisis.

The reservists called in 1962 were never actually committed in any operations and remained on active duty only one month.

In 1961 the United States called up 150,000 men, mostly Army, but also some Air National Guardsmen, for the Berlin crisis. Those reservists were held about 10 months.

Johnson acted shortly after Clark M. Clifford, his choice to become the next secretary of defense, had told a Senate committee that a call-up of U.S. military reservists could come about as a result of Far Eastern developments including the seizure of the USS Pueblo by North Korea patrol boats.

Johnson directed Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara to place on active duty enough men to man and maintain 372 fighter and transport aircraft. The White House said it did not know how many men would be involved.

Press secretary George Christian, making the surprise announcement in the Pueblo crisis, raised the possibility of mobilizing ground forces by saying:

"When and if decisions are made on call-ups of Army of Marine Corps reservists, announcements will be made promptly."

Asked if such action was under consideration, Christian stuck to his statement.

The press aide, a participant in top level crisis talks at the White House, said the call-up of the air reservists was "only one action in this matter."

The presence of Arthur J. Goldberg, ambassador to the United Nations, at White House Pueblo talks had raised the possibility of some move through the United Nations to recover the intelligence ship and the 33 Americans captured with her.

As for continuing diplomatic efforts, Christian said:

"We certainly hope that they bear some fruit in the near future."

Under law, the reservists being called to active duty can be retained in uniform for 24 months.

The order is effective immediately but Christian said specific orders to individual reserve units had yet to be dispatched.

Johnson acted under a provision of the 1967 Defense Appropriations Act which states:

"Until June 30, 1968, the President may when he deems it necessary order to active duty any unit of the ready reserve for a period not to exceed 24 months."

When asked if any progress was being made on the diplomatic front, Christian simply responded, "efforts are sill being made."

The press aide said, as was apparent on he surface, that the moblization of air reservists was directly connected with the Pueblo crisis.

Asked why such action was necessary, he replied, "I don't want to interpret it."

He reported Johnson reached the decision at a breakfast conference with, among others, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Ambassador Goldberg.

The White House, as if to point this up, said Johnson and Goldberg exchanged views and "they will be in touch again during the day."

Others at the breakfast conference were Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Walt W. Rostow, Johnsons's special assistant for national security affairs, press secretary George Christian and assistant press secretary Tom Johnson.

The White House said: "There may be other meetings during the day with these and other advisers."

It was also disclosed that Johnson met Wednesday night with Rusk, McNamara, Rostow, Christian, Tom Johnson and Clark M. Clifford, who is to succeed McNamara as secretary of defense.

A second urgent effort to enlist Soviet help in freeing the U.S. Navy intelligence ship and 83 Americans aboard from their captors may be made soon despite an initial cold shoulder from Moscow, White House informants said.

President Johnson and his top strategists held crisis discussions late into the night Wednesday, weighing diplomatic alternatives while the nuclear-powered American aircraft carrier Enterprise hovered within striking distance of North Korea.

In addition, the Air Force reportedly moved two jet fighter squadrons from Okinawa to South Korea as a precautionary measure to bolster the small force of 18 fighter bombers already at Osan and Kusan. About 36 jets were involved in the move.

From Capitol Hill came statements from two senators that any U.S.-North Korean war resulting from the ship's seizure could lead to U.S. use of nuclear weapons. Other Congress members cautioned against precipitate U. S. use of forces.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who has opposed U.S. policy in Vietnam, called the capture "an act of war" and added: "The ship must be returned at once, with all Americans aboard. Our national honor is at stake here."

At the Pentagon a spokesman traded long-distance verbal rounds with North Korea over an alleged spy confession by the Pueblo's captain and Defense Department officials sought to absolve Washington headquarters of any responsibility for not speeding air help to the Pueblo before her capture Monday night.

Defense officials said that when North Korean gunboats apprehended the small, lightly-armed intelligence ship around midnight Monday EST, U.S. Navy Commanders in the Pacific area decided against sending warplanes.

Washington was not consulted in the decision, officials said.

Pentagon sources also said the Pueblo's skipper, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher ordered his vessel's sophisticated electronic gear and secret codes destroyed when the Reds boarded.

Still unanswered publicly are such questions as why the Pueblo did not get help from U.S. forces in the area, or wasn't scuttled, or didn't fight.

Phil G. Goulding, assistant secretary of defense, denounced as "a travesty on the facts" the Communist claim that Bucher confessed to a deep intrusion of North Korean waters.

He said both the Pueblo's reports and the North Korean's own radar—tracked by U.S. monitors—"show conclusively that the Pueblo was in international waters."

Other Administration sources maintained the ship was always several miles outside the Reds' claimed 12-mile limit.

Goulding said of the alleged Bucher confession: "The style and wording of the document provide unmistakable evidence in themselves that this was not written or prepared by an American."

Radio Pyongyang in the North Korean capital broadcast Bucher's purported 700-word statement, in which he allegedly admitted carrying out spy assignments for the Central Intelligence Agency.

"I and my crew have perpetrated such a grave criminal act, but our parents and wives and children at home are anxiously waiting for us to return home in safety," said Bucher's alleged confession, concluding: "Therefore, we only hope, and it is the greatest desire of myself and all my crew, that we will be forgiven leniently by the government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea."

Barbecue Too Hot

Firemen extinguished a small fire at the Cream Castle, 801 West Malone, at 12:30 a.m. today.

U.S. Strings On Welfare Criticized

JEFFERSON CITY AP - State Welfare Director Proctor N. Carter presented his $228 million budget to an exasperated Senate Appropriations Committee today.

Members said they were exasperated because of all the strings the federal government puts on its aid to the welfare program.

Of the welfare total, $145 million would be paid by the federal government, Carter said. And except for a few bucks here and there, he added, the federal government just about dictates the amount the state must spend.

The alternative, he said, would be for the state to finance the entire program. Carter has been director of welfare in Missouri since 1945.

Sen. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville, committee chairman, praised Carter for his candid report and told other members "when it comes to appropriations, there's not much he or any of us can do to trim the welfare budget."

Sen. John E. Downs, D-St. Joseph, expressed amazement that "we can jump on other agencies over issues like whether they should buy a used jeep instead of a new one, but we can't say much when $228 million is involved."

The blow-up came just a day before a 30-man team of federal officials was scheduled to talk with state leaders in an effort to better state and federal relations on jointly financed programs.

Carter said the federal government has demanded that his department, in many instances, do things "which frankly don't seem to make much sense."

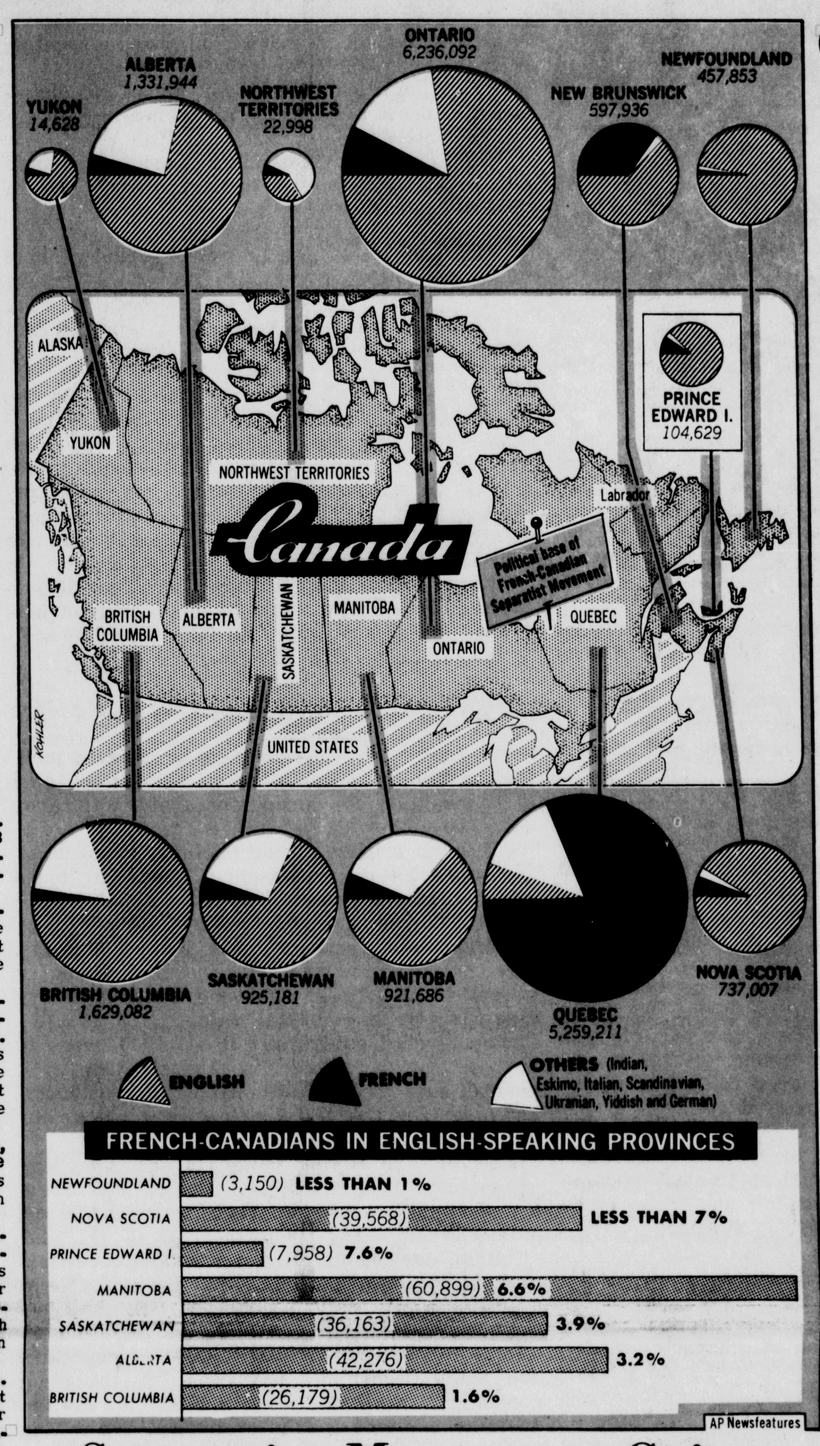
Plant Layoff Normal

A rumor concerning a layoff of employes of the Anchor Toy Corporation plant as an indication that the plant might close was quashed today.

Officials at the plant said the rumor is "completely unfounded."

There has been a layoff at the plant but it is normal for this time of the year, officials said. Toy production is a seasonal business and January, February and March constitute the most slack period normally.

Franklin Struwe, office manager at the plant 12 years, has resigned to accept a position with the Clinton Construction Company. He, too, confirmed that the rumor concerning the plant's closing was unfounded.



Separatist Movement Gains

QUEBEC (AP) -- The French-Canadian separatist movement, strengthened by new leadership and encouraged by the views of French President Charles de Gaulle, shows signs of broadening its narrow political base in Quebec province.

The minority movement, growing at a snail's pace for the last 10 years amid the sweeping social change of Quebec's "quiet revolution," attracted significant new support in 1967 among professional politicians.

But separatism also picked up a notable number of new opponents, including the Opposition Liberal party which rejected separatism "in all its forms" and Premier Daniel Johnson, who rejected separatism "for the moment."

Johnson believes that French-speaking Canadians, 80 per cent of whom live in Quebec province, can remain within the Canadian federal structure, provided constitutional changes make them "feel at home in all Canada."

In the existing constitutional setup under the 1867 British North America Act, Quebec is the only Canadian province where both French and English enjoy official status in the legislature, courts and schools.

Bilingualism in some form was recommended to the nine other provinces, which are unilingually English, by a federal royal commission of inquiry whose language recommendations will be studied by the provinces and federal government in February.

While federalist politicians prepare for discussions on bilingualism at constitutional talks called by Prime Minister Lester Pearson, the separatist plan meetings to find ways of struggling out of the political wilderness.

They view the provincial state as the sole savior of the French culture in North America, arguing that only in Quebec can French-Canadians master their destiny, for only here do they form a majority.

They contend that French-Canadians, who numbered 5,540,000 or 30 per cent of the Canadian population in the 1961 census, can never live with dignity in Canada because they will forever be a minority.

The best way to protect the French culture in predominantly English-language North America, they claim, is to build Quebec into an independent state whose sole official language would be French.

In Quebec, according to the 1961 census, the French-speaking population numbered about 4,200,000 or more than 81 per cent of the provincial population. The remaining 1,340,000 French-Canadians live in other provinces.

Two events in 1967 make separatists view their future with optimism -- the state visit of De Gaulle in July and the resignation from the Quebec Liberal party in October of an influential politician, former Quebec Cabinet Minister Rene Levesque.

Emotionally, separatism's finest moment came that night in July when De Gaulle mounted the balcony of Montreal's city hall to shout the separatist rallying cry, "Vive le Quebec Libre" -- Long Love Free Quebec.

Politically, separatism's biggest gain came when Levesque broke with the Liberal party to advocate establishing an independent Quebec linked to the rest of Canada by a form of economic "common market."

Levesque, among the province's most popular politicians, is heading a movement to regroup separatist forces in a single separatist party whose policies would attract wider popular support.

Many Levesque supporters scorn oldtime separatists as immature, complex-ridden characters whose real rallying cry is "Maudit Anglais" -- Damm English -- not "Quebec Libre."

Levesque's campaigning in Quebec since he quit the Liberal party has produced indications he may be able to extend support for separatism beyond its base among middle-class intellectuals.

Almost all observers concede that Levesque will be able to increase support for separatism, but few would agree with his personal forecast that Quebec independence is only four years from realization.

In fact many separatists say privately that they anticipate continued tough going, electorally, arising from lack of widepsread support in the politically powerful rural areas.

Despite these electoral problems the separatist issue is taken seriously, at least by Quebec politicians, because it represents an extreme expression of a broadly-based form of French-Canadian nationalism.

This new nationalism, forged amid profound social change as Quebec adjusted to accelerated urban and industrial growth, views the state as guardian of the French culture. A large proportion of its adherents are in universities, the professions and intellectual circles.

The Liberals applied this nationalism in constitutional terms by urging that Quebec have special status in Canada as the principal home of "la nation Canadienne-Francaise."

Some of the country's most outspoken opponents of separatism include French-Canadians in other provinces, centered mostly in neighboring Ontario -- 425,000 or 7 per cent of the population -- and New Brunswick -- 211,000 or 35 per cent.

The French Canadian minority outside Quebec tend to identify the federal government as the government in the best position to preserve the French fact in Canada and see themselves as the key to French language expansion.

As a result French-Canadian separatism is confined almost exclusively to Quebec, although some radicals suggest an independent French state including bordering regions of northwestern New Brunswick and northeastern Ontario.

The royal commission on bilingualism recommended that official bilingualism be extnded to Ontario and New Brunswick and that bilingual districts be established where justified in other individual provinces.

The proportion of Canadians whose ethnic origin is French remains virtually the same today as at the time of confederation in 1867 when it numbered slightly more than 1,000,000 or 30 per cent of the total population.

At confederation, more than 929,000 lived in the province of Quebec and French-Canadians then formed about 14 per cent of the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Two Men Captured

POPLAR BLUFF -- Two Chicago men are charged with armed robbery following their capture at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday by Pocahontas, Ark., officers near Reno, Ark.

Officers said that Joseph David Brodin, 30, and Charles Henry Rosenthal, 35, admitted holding up Billy Butler, attendant at the Simpson Oil company on highway 67 in Poplar Bluff, Wednesday morning, and making their getaway in a 1960 Dodge.

Recovered from the pair was $15.00 in bills and $12.31 in change, taken from the attendant, who was reported to have identified the pair.

The two men waived extradition and were returned to Poplar Bluff.

Gardner To Quit Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The resignation of John W. Gardner as secretary of health, education and welfare was announced by the White House today.

Gardner, 55, asked to be relieved of his Cabinet post on or before March 1. He joins a growing list of high-level officials leaving their government posts.

No successor was named immediately.

Gardner, a Republican, joined the President's Cabinet in July 1965.

In a letter released by the White House, Gardner said that when he came to Washington to take the HEW post he took a two-year leave of absence from the Carnegie Corporation and had "overstayed that leave half a year."

He said he now planned to return there as a consultant and would be working at "some special projects relating to the problems of the cities."

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara already is leaving the Cabinet by March 1 to become president of the World Bank, and the resignation of U.N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg has been expected early this year.

The recent turnover also has extended to the budget director and chairmen of the Council of Economic Advisers, Interstate Commerce Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board.

Published reports had indicated Gardner wished to disassociate himself from the President's policy on Vietnam and was displeased by cuts in the budget of his department. Gardner's office denied this Tuesday and said he had not submitted his resignation.

Gardner wrote that he left the department with regret. He said, "It is a great and vigorous department and I am proud to have been associated with it."

President Johnson's two-paragraph reply accepted the resignation with deep regret. Johnson said Gardner had served the nation ably and faithfully and had helped build HEW during a critical period of its growth.

Korean Reds Try to Break U.S. Lines

SEOUL (AP) — As tension continued following the capture of the Pueblo, North Koreans tried to break through the American sector of the Korean front today and wounded eight U.S. soldiers.

The North Koreans also attacked a watch tower just south of the demilitarized zone with hand grenades but caused no damage, a U.S. Army spokesman said.

Sporadic shooting continued from about 2:30 a.m. until early afternoon. The Communists made attempts to break through the fence along the buffer zone, the American added.

The Communist infiltrators were all repulsed but it was not known if they suffered any casualties, the spokesman said.

Besides the eight Americans wounded, he said, two South Korean soldiers attached to the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division were killed and another was wounded.

This brought the American casualties in the two days of clashes to one dead and 12 wounded.

South Korean troops pursuing the remnants of the 31-man North Korean assassination group that invaded Seoul Sunday night killed two more of them today.

This made 19 members of the band killed, and another was captured. The invaders killed 16 South Koreans, including six civilians, and wounded 35.

South Korean Foreign Minister Choi Kyu-hah denounced the Communist seizure of the Pueblo, describing it as "one of the most serious threats to the security of the Republic of Korea and the Far East."

Fire Razes Exhibition Hall And Destroys Commodities

CARUTHERSVILLE -- The exhibition hall at the fairgrounds and a large supply of surplus commodity foods were destroyed in a fire Wednesday afternoon.

The building was being used as a warehouse distribution point for the foods. About eight freight car loads of the foodstuffs were in the building.

Firemen received the call about 2:45 p.m. and fought the blaze four hours.

Damage to the building was estimated at $25,000. Value of the foodstuffs has not been determined.

The fire apparently started when a stack of sacked meal fell onto an oil stove. Oil leaked out of the stove and spread throughout the building causing the fire to go out of control.

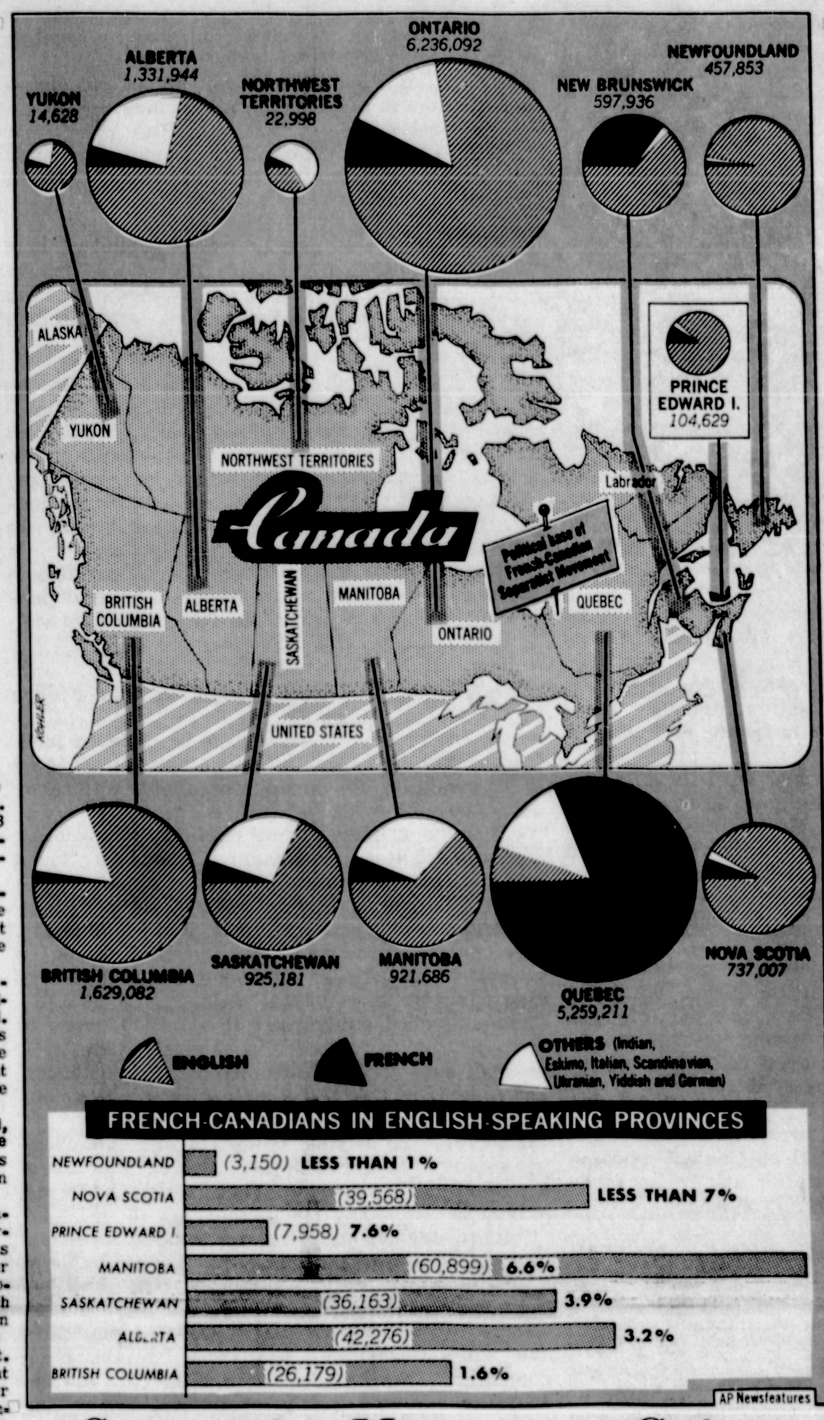
Plant Layoff Normal

A rumor concerning a layoff of employes of the Anchor Toy Corporation plant as an indication that the plant might close was quashed today.

Officials at the plant said the rumor is "completely unfounded."

There has been a layoff at the plant but it is normal for this time of the year, officials said. Toy production is a seasonal business and January, February and March constitute the most slack period normally.

Franklin Struwe, office manager at the plant 12 years, has resigned to accept a position with the Clinton Construction Company. He, too, confirmed that the rumor concerning the plant's closing was unfounded.



Gardner To Quit Cabinet

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The resignation of John W. Gardner as secretary of health, education and welfare was announced by the White House today.

Gardner, 55, asked to be relieved of his Cabinet post on or before March 1. He joins a growing list of high-level officials leaving their government posts.

No successor was named immediately.

Gardner, a Republican, joined the President's Cabinet in July 1965.

In a letter released by the White House, Gardner said that when he came to Washington to take the HEW post he took a two-year leave of absence from the Carnegie Corporation and had "overstayed that leave half a year."

He said he now planned to return there as a consultant and would be working at "some special projects relating to the problems of the cities."

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara already is leaving the Cabinet by March 1 to become president of the World Bank, and the resignation of U.N. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg has been expected early this year.

The recent turnover also has extended to the budget director and chairmen of the Council of Economic Advisers, Interstate Commerce Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board.

Published reports had indicated Gardner wished to disassociate himself from the President's policy on Vietnam and was displeased by cuts in the budget of his department. Gardner's office denied this Tuesday and said he had not submitted his resignation.

Gardner wrote that he left the department with regret. He said, "It is a great and vigorous department and I am proud to have been associated with it."

President Johnson's two-paragraph reply accepted the resignation with deep regret. Johnson said Gardner had served the nation ably and faithfully and had helped build HEW during a critical period of its growth.

Separatist Movement Gains

QUEBEC (AP) -- The French-Canadian separatist movement, strengthened by new leadership and encouraged by the views of French President Charles de Gaulle, shows signs of broadening its narrow political base in Quebec province.

The minority movement, growing at a snail's pace for the last 10 years amid the sweeping social change of Quebec's "quiet revolution," attracted significant new support in 1967 among professional politicians.

But separatism also picked up a notable number of new opponents, including the Opposition Liberal party which rejected separatism "in all its forms" and Premier Daniel Johnson, who rejected separatism "for the moment."

Johnson believes that French-speaking Canadians, 80 per cent of whom live in Quebec province, can remain within the Canadian federal structure, provided constitutional changes make them "feel at home in all Canada."

In the existing constitutional setup under the 1867 British North America Act, Quebec is the only Canadian province where both French and English enjoy official status in the legislature, courts and schools.

Bilingualism in some form was recommended to the nine other provinces, which are unilingually English, by a federal royal commission of inquiry whose language recommendations will be studied by the provinces and federal government in February.

While federalist politicians prepare for discussions on bilingualism at constitutional talks called by Prime Minister Lester Pearson, the separatist plan meetings to find ways of struggling out of the political wilderness.

They view the provincial state as the sole savior of the French culture in North America, arguing that only in Quebec can French-Canadians master their destiny, for only here do they form a majority.

They contend that French-Canadians, who numbered 5,540,000 or 30 per cent of the Canadian population in the 1961 census, can never live with dignity in Canada because they will forever be a minority.

The best way to protect the French culture in predominantly English-language North America, they claim, is to build Quebec into an independent state whose sole official language would be French.

In Quebec, according to the 1961 census, the French-speaking population numbered about 4,200,000 or more than 81 per cent of the provincial population. The remaining 1,340,000 French-Canadians live in other provinces.

Two events in 1967 make separatists view their future with optimism -- the state visit of De Gaulle in July and the resignation from the Quebec Liberal party in October of an influential politician, former Quebec Cabinet Minister Rene Levesque.

Emotionally, separatism's finest moment came that night in July when De Gaulle mounted the balcony of Montreal's city hall to shout the separatist rallying cry, "Vive le Quebec Libre" -- Long Love Free Quebec.

Politically, separatism's biggest gain came when Levesque broke with the Liberal party to advocate establishing an independent Quebec linked to the rest of Canada by a form of economic "common market."

Levesque, among the province's most popular politicians, is heading a movement to regroup separatist forces in a single separatist party whose policies would attract wider popular support.

Many Levesque supporters scorn oldtime separatists as immature, complex-ridden characters whose real rallying cry is "Maudit Anglais" -- Damm English -- not "Quebec Libre."

Levesque's campaigning in Quebec since he quit the Liberal party has produced indications he may be able to extend support for separatism beyond its base among middle-class intellectuals.

Almost all observers concede that Levesque will be able to increase support for separatism, but few would agree with his personal forecast that Quebec independence is only four years from realization.

In fact many separatists say privately that they anticipate continued tough going, electorally, arising from lack of widepsread support in the politically powerful rural areas.

Despite these electoral problems the separatist issue is taken seriously, at least by Quebec politicians, because it represents an extreme expression of a broadly-based form of French-Canadian nationalism.

This new nationalism, forged amid profound social change as Quebec adjusted to accelerated urban and industrial growth, views the state as guardian of the French culture. A large proportion of its adherents are in universities, the professions and intellectual circles.

The Liberals applied this nationalism in constitutional terms by urging that Quebec have special status in Canada as the principal home of "la nation Canadienne-Francaise."

Some of the country's most outspoken opponents of separatism include French-Canadians in other provinces, centered mostly in neighboring Ontario -- 425,000 or 7 per cent of the population -- and New Brunswick -- 211,000 or 35 per cent.

The French Canadian minority outside Quebec tend to identify the federal government as the government in the best position to preserve the French fact in Canada and see themselves as the key to French language expansion.

As a result French-Canadian separatism is confined almost exclusively to Quebec, although some radicals suggest an independent French state including bordering regions of northwestern New Brunswick and northeastern Ontario.

The royal commission on bilingualism recommended that official bilingualism be extnded to Ontario and New Brunswick and that bilingual districts be established where justified in other individual provinces.

The proportion of Canadians whose ethnic origin is French remains virtually the same today as at the time of confederation in 1867 when it numbered slightly more than 1,000,000 or 30 per cent of the total population.

At confederation, more than 929,000 lived in the province of Quebec and French-Canadians then formed about 14 per cent of the provinces of Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Korean Reds Try to Break U.S. Lines

SEOUL (AP) -- As tension continued following the capture of the Pueblo, North Koreans tried to break through the American sector of the Korean front today and wounded eight U.S. soldiers.

The North Koreans also attacked a watch tower just south of the demilitarized zone with hand grenades but caused no damage, a U.S. Army spokesman said.

Sporadic shooting continued from about 2:30 a.m. until early afternoon. The Communists made attempts to break through the fence along the buffer zone, the American added.

The Communist infiltrators were all repulsed but it was not known if they suffered any casualties, the spokesman said.

Besides the eight Americans wounded, he said, two South Korean soldiers attached to the U.S. 2nd Infantry Division were killed and another was wounded.

This brought the American casualties in the two days of clashes to one dead and 12 wounded.

South Korean troops pursuing the remnants of the 31-man North Korean assassination group that invaded Seoul Sunday night killed two more of them today.

This made 19 members of the band killed, and another was captured. The invaders killed 16 South Koreans, including six civilians, and wounded 35.

South Korean Foreign Minister Choi Kyu-hah denounced the Communist seizure of the Pueblo, describing it as "one of the most serious threats to the security of the Republic of Korea and the Far East."

Fire Razes Exhibition Hall And Destroys Commodities

CARUTHERSVILLE -- The exhibition hall at the fairgrounds and a large supply of surplus commodity foods were destroyed in a fire Wednesday afternoon.

The building was being used as a warehouse distribution point for the foods. About eight freight car loads of the foodstuffs were in the building.

Firemen received the call about 2:45 p.m. and fought the blaze four hours.

Damage to the building was estimated at $25,000. Value of the foodstuffs has not been determined.

The fire apparently started when a stack of sacked meal fell onto an oil stove. Oil leaked out of the stove and spread throughout the building causing the fire to go out of control.

Most college students stick to their knitting.

The hippies and the Vietnam war protest marchers are in the minority but they have marred the image of all collegians.

One of the most constructive moves undertaken to change this image is the decision by The Phoenix, student newspaper of the Queens College in New York, to send two correspondents to Vietnam.

Informing themselves first hand is a better approach than marching in the streets, sloganeering or even writing editorials about faraway events. The two correspondents will be the envy of all newspapermen, who haven't had the opportunity themselves to go directly to the war scene.

The Phoenix staff expected college authorities to object to the project but President Joseph P. McMurray gave his full support.

The students have raised enough money to send the two men to Vietnam but not enough to pay for the return trip. They plan to finance the trip back by syndicating articles in other college publications.

Some care must have been taken in selecting the students. An obvious effort was made to present a balanced picture.

Lee Dembart, a graduate student who already is on the way, has opposed the administration's war policies. He is a former managing editor of the Phoenix.

Ralph Paladino, who is scheduled to leave Thursday, has supported the administration's Vietnam policy.

Editors of student papers are the most draft conscious of any in the country. So they come by their militancy naturally.

Many have sympathized with student demonstrators against military recruiters, industrial suppliers of war materials and the selective service system. The Michigan Daily even has questioned the University of Michigan's participation in defense department research projects.

This militancy has dismayed college administrators, alumni, even many students.

The hope will be that in sending two students to Vietnam and by wide dissemination of their dispatches student editorial opinion will become more responsible, reasonable and be on more factual evidence than it has in the past.

Travel can be broadening.

Only stain on her character is that lately she has been seen in the company of a salesman with a doubtful reputation."

Drivers who ignore traffic control devices make driving even more hazardous, and often cause the injury or death of an innocent driver or pdestrian.

Reporting last year's figures, the Traffic Safety Association of Detroit says that 33 persons were killed and more than 5,600 were injured in that city because some driver, either carelessly or deliberately, disregarded a traffic control device such as a stop sign, red light or yield sign.

Quoting Inspector Arthur Sonnenberg, head of Detroit's Accident Prevention Bureau, the association adds that the same type of violation caused 11 deaths and 3,000 injuries in the first eight months of 1967.

"The problem of disregarding traffic control devices is even more severe than the statistics indicate," says a spokesman for TSA. This is because many accidents are charged to a contributing cause, such as speeding, drunk driving or reckless driving, in mishaps involving right-of-way.

To combat the problem, the TSA has started a poster campaign to alert drivers to look and think twice at stop lights and signs. Featuring pictures of such control devices, the posters ask the question, "Will he?" meaning the other driver.

"You never know what the other driver will do when he encounters a traffic light or stop sign," says Inspector Sonnenberg. "He may be daydreaming or intentionally meaning to commit a violation.

"Although YOU know that YOU will obey the sign," adds Sonnenberg, "the other driver may not and you could find yourself in bad trouble."

To that, the Driver's Seat can only add, "Drive defensively -- watch out for the other guy!"

INFLATION AT A GLANCE

.Too much money in circulation caused huge demand for goods and services, creating shortages and higher prices. Now taking shape, increased costs due to shortages and recent wage hikes. Thus, two-pronged inflation -- demand pull and cost push.

.The average American had $10 less purchasing power in June than he had in January.

.Cost of living expected to increase 4% in 1966, that much more in 1967.

.Several big corporations ready themselves for a tax increase to the 51-52% range, from 48%. Plans for personal income tax hike being readied.

.New round of wage contract negotiations, coming up, expected to cost industry billions -- creating more cost push inflation pressure.

.No sign of cut in federal nondefense spending--a major cause of too much money in circulation--unless voters demand it at the polls.

.Wage and price control being seriously studied as an anti-inflationary device, for duration of war in Vietnam.

Mr. Charles Shuman, American Farm Bureau Federation President, says that the Administration is pursuing a "cheap food" policy which is hurting farmers and not helping consumers. "Producers of livestock (which has no supply management program) and soybeans (which generally sell for more than the support price) are already operating under a market system. In fact, two-thirds of agriculture which operate outside of government subsidy and control programs have done better than the controlled sector of farming," President Shuman says.

Recovery of the stock market has abated fears of a 1966 depression.

It now appears that such fears were never justified. At the grassroots of the American economy the probability of a serious recession was never accepted.

While stock prices were declining, production and distribution of consumer goods continued at an accelerated pace. The consumer had more relative buying power than at any time in history.

Confidence of retailers was reflected in the largest increase in newspaper advertising in recent years. There has been a corresponding rise in the volume of retail sales.

Indeed, retail sales for August, 1966, were 10 per cent higher than for August, 1965. Of course, such an increase in the demand for goods and services has resulted in higher prices for some products.

However, the buying power of the American consumer has far out-paced price increases. Production in key industries has mounted and gained in efficiency.

Neither serious inflation nor recession seems probable so long as ample goods are available to a public which has the wealth to buy on an unprecendented scale.

Perhaps what has confused market speculators and some economists has been the change in consumer buying habits which affected a few industries adversely. The goods that are selling on the burgeoning retail market today are not the same goods which sold in 1960. And by 1970 an entirely new complex of goods and services will be in demand.

Retailers who have been increasing advertising to meet changing demands have been prospering while the timid talk of recession and tight money.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Robertson is a take a chance guy.

Although the handsome young actor has been one of the busiest and most successful performers in television, he felt that in none of his 13 movies had he been given a really great role.

"Some of them were pretty suffocating," he said. "So since the mountain wouldn't come to me, I decided to go to the mountain."

Five years ago he bought the film rights to a short story called "Flowers for Algernon," by Daniel Keyes. It is the touching story of a young bakery worker who aspires to lead a normal life but is handicapped by the fact he has an intelligence quotient of only 59.

Retitled "Charly"— that's how the retarded boy spells his name— the film will be released by ABC-Paramount in a few months.

"I've had this story in my guts for five long years," said Cliff, who worked on the writing of the screen play and also beat on Hollywood's golden doors until he found a financial sponsor.

"I may not make a nickel out of it, but I'll at least have the satisfaction of having done it. I didn't want to be the kind of a guy who 20 years from now would be sitting around saying to himself, 'If only I— .'"

Actually, Robertson is probably overcritical of his own work in films. His screen credits include "Picnic", "PT-109," "The Best Man," and "The Honey Pot."

But he did get a little vexed at having some of the best roles he played on television or Broadway wind up on the screen being played by Jack Lemmon, Paul Newman, and Marlon Brando, friendly as he happens to be with each of them.

"I felt like I was often a bridesmaid, but never the bride," he said. "My career has been one of defensive fighting. Now I've got a chance for the knockout."

Since youth Robertson has led a life of knockabout adventure and variety. At the age of nine he was working a newspaper route in his native La Jolla, Calif.

At 14 he was doing odd jobs around an airport in exchange for free flying lessons. At 16 he was a seaman aboard a cargo ship in the Pacific when it was bombed by a Japanese plane.

While attending Antioch (Ohio) College, he wrote a radio column and served as an announcer. During the later years of World War II he was a junior Navy officer aboard ammunition ships in Atlantic and Mediterranean combat areas.

Determined to follow a theatrical career, Cliff studied at the Actors Studio here, earning his way as a bus boy, waiter, stevedore, and taxi driver. His first professional success was with an acting group that toured the Catskills Mountain resorts. His pay: $5 a week and room and board.

It doesn't sound possible, but it's true. The Missouri State Highway Patrol reports that 787 pedestrians lost their lives in traffic from 1963 to 1967.

Records of the Patrol show that the highest number of pedestrian deaths in Missouri during this five year period occurred in 1965 when 174 persons were killed. The next highest pedestrian toll was recorded last year with 172. The years 1963, 1964 and 1966 recorded 141, 140 and 160 pedestrian deaths, respectively.

"This is a distressing number of pedestrian traffic deaths," declared Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol," especially when you consider that just a little more alertness on the part of the involved motorists and pedestrians may have prevented many of these tragedies."

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that the business of pedestrian safety is a two-way proposition involving the motorist and pedestrian. Both must have a realistic awareness of each other's problems and work together in a common endeavor to reduce the heavy pedestrian traffic toll.

"A driver should expect a pedestrian to have faulty judgment in estimating the speed of an automobile, in figuring how well the driver can see him, and in determining how long it will take him to bring the car to a stop," Hockaday stated. "In the same way, a pedestrian should never assume that just because he can see the approaching car, the driver can see him.

"If both drivers and pedestrians would recognize these limitations of one another, and at the same time expect the unexpected, many pedestrian accidents could be prevented," he concluded.

HILL 875--WHAT PLACE IN HISTORY?

Hill 875 takes its place alongside the names of all the other battles in all the other wars in which American fighting men have distinguished themselves.

Having said that, however, it is impossible at this moment to estimate what importance military historians will give it when they come to write the final history of the Vietnam war.

The fighting in the Dak To region of South Vietnam did not take place along a front that can be neatly drawn on a map. It was not part of a general offensive aimed at piercing the enemy's lines and sweeping his armies back in confusion.

The enemy is everywhere in South Vietnam, and the battles against him erupt from one end of the country to the other.

It is ironic that at the height of this battle -- the most fiercely fought thus far -- General Westmoreland was telling the American people that the war was entering a phase in which "the end begins to come into view," a phase in which the South Vietnamese begin to assume the brunt of the struggle and the United States begins to reduce its forces.

From the statistics alone, it was an allied victory. The four North Vietnamese regiments engaged lost an estimated 1,377 dead and an unknown number wounded. American casualties were 274 dead and 939 wounded. South Vietnamese: about 75 dead and 200 wounded.

The casualty figures from Dak To could tell another story -- that the enemy, far from weakening, is fighting more confidently than ever.

SOME CONSUMER PROTECTION PLEASE

Spokesmen for the antitrust division of the Department of Justice have indicated that they do not envision a broad scale program imposing limitations on advertising. But, at the same time, there continues in official circles the underlying belief that advertising results in higher prices. Nothing could be further from the truth. Advertising builds sales volume and lower unit costs. Consumers benefit in lower prices, abundance and variety in the marketplace.

Despite fine-spun theories to the contrary, excessive federal straitjacketing of the merchandising process would guarantee scarcity, higher prices, disruption of production and employment and bankruptcy for a good many of our newspapers and periodicals. With this type of thinking in official circles, consumers may need protection, but it certainly isn't from advertising.

H.L. Hunt Says

ACTION NEEDED IN 1968

The second session of the 90th U. S. Congress, which will be convened on January 15, can perform a great service to the Republic by approving for submission to the states a proposed constitutional a mendment reforming the Electoral College system by adoption of the Congressional District Plan. This plan is fair, equitable and in accord with the reasoned sentiments of the founders of freedom in America.

Under the Congressional District Plan, both major political parties would necessarily nominate the best available candidates for electors. The qualifications and attributes of each of the candidates would be well known to the voters of his district. Candidates for the two electors at large from each state could be better known than candidates for governor and other state offices.

Their high caliber would make them useful in a number of capacities during the campaign. They would contribute to the reputation of their party and its precepts and principles. They would add to the acceptability of every party candidate for office.

Adoption of the Congressional District Plan would preserve the Electoral College, which is based on tenets considered fundamental by the authors of our Federal Constitution. In operation it would be a strong force for the preservation of our Republic and the individual liberties which Americans regard as their inalienable right.

There is no possibility that the plan can be adopted in time for its use in the 1968 elections. Its submission is not a partisan matter. The best interests of the people will be served by early congressional approval of the plan. HLH

Doc. Duncan Says

About the only difference in a full grown dictatorship and conditions in our nation as of today is in the dictatorship. A protestor risks facing a firing squad at sunrise, while at present protests by our people just runs off like water on a duck's back and that means only one thing -- the people have lost control and that's the first phase of a vicious dictatorship that in a short while, if left run, can order no protests or face the consequences.

(Editor's Note-- The brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, today goes to Clark Clifford, the new Secretary of Defense.)

WASHINGTON - Clark Clifford, the new Secretary of Defense, allots himself three cigarets a day, and lunches in his elegant paneled office on a sandwich and orange juice. He drinks prune juice as if it were a martini and is as careful of his diet as he is in handling the cases of his clients.

These clients, which range from the far-flung Du Pont De Nemours to the Radio Corporation of America, from General Electric to El Paso Natural Gas and Phillips Petroleum, will be the only aspect of Clifford's career the Senate will want to examine.

He has almost never lost a case. One exception was the dispute over the sale of President Kennedy's Georgetown house in 1960. When Kennedy was first elected he sold the small brick house on N. Street to Harry Ausbrook for $105,000, then considered a handsome and somewhat inflated price. But Jackie Kennedy changed her mind, decided she didn't want to sell after all; and the President - elect asked Clark Clifford to get the house back.

But Ausbrook retained ex-Secretary of State Dean Acheson in his bid to keep the house. Acheson won. The President - elect was forced to go through with the sale.

Clifford and Acheson, together with Justice Abe Fortas, now on the Supreme Court, today are probably the three advisers closest to Lyndon Johnson. They are consulted on major moves in the war in Vietnam. All three are hawks.

TRUMAN'S GHOSTWRITER

Looking over Merry-Go-Round columns covering the Truman era, we noted an item published June 13, 1946, which read, "A new power in President Truman's entourage is commander Clark Clifford." Clifford had met Truman through his St. Louis friend, Stuart Symington, then a member of the Truman little cabinet. Though ranking only as a naval aide, Clifford came to the front fast.

In June 1946, the war was not quite one year over. Tremendous proolems faced the new President. Significant items appeared in the column indicating the man who was chiefly helping Truman make the shift.

On Oct. 12, 1946, it was noted that Clark Clifford has "usurped Harry Vaughan's office near Truman's" and that Vaughan was "outraged." The President himself had to suggest the shift before Vaughan would move.

On Dec. 22, 1946, it was noted that Clifford had begun drafting the State of the Union Message. In January he advised Truman to end price controls and war powers. In June 1947 he revamped the entire housing program. In July he wrote Truman's message vetoing the Taft-Hartley Act.

Earlier, in February of that year, he had drafted the army-navy merger, a law which he will now have to live with as Secretary of Defense.

By the summer of 1947, the handsome attorney from eastern Missouri had become so powerful inside the White House that he aroused the jealousy of Truman advisers from western Missouri, notably Harry Vaughan. Backing Vaughan were John Steelman and Matt Connelly. It was noted that they were leaking stories about Clifford, and heckled him in staff conferences.

Clifford continued to ghost-write Truman's messages to Congress, but by 1950 jealousy inside the White House intensified to the point where he bowed out.

It was the opposition of Connelly and Steelman, which caused Clifford to lose his first big case -- the merger of Pan American Airways with American Overseas air line. Clifford was retained by TWA to block the merger. The CAB was with him. But Truman listened to his anti-Clifford advisers and ruled for the merger.

CORPORATIONS IN TROUBLE

President Johnson once told a friend: "If you ever get into trouble -- if you ever get arrested and need someone to help you out, get hold of Clark Clifford."

For the past 15 years, Clifford has been doing exactly that for some of the biggest corporations in the nation. He was retained by General Electric after it was fined the largest amount in history and had three executives jailed in an antitrust case.

General Electric ranges between being the nation's second and fourth largest defense contractor. In 1967 it had defense orders totaling $1,289,800,000. This means that the new Secretary of Defense will be in somewhat the same position Charles E. Wilson of General Motors was in when he became Secretary of Defense. Wilson severed all connections with GM.

Clifford was also hired by Du Pont when its stockholders wanted to avoid paying a huge income tax following divestiture of General Motors. Clifford persuaded his friends in Congress to pass a special act saving Du Pont millions. His fee, reported to be $1 million, was to be paid over a period of years.

If that fee is still running, Clifford will be in a worse position than either Wilson or Secretary of Defense McNamara who had to sell his stock in the Ford Motor Company. To give up an unpaid, continuing law fee will be a greater sacrifice than selling stock.

However, General Motors ranks ninth as a defense contractor with contracts totaling $625,100,000 in fiscal 1967; while Du Pont had $179,600,000 in contracts. Both firms also have research and development grants from the federal government, Du Pont having received $1,922,000 in 1966 and General Motors $53,166,000. This money is awarded through the Department of Defense.

The former attorney for Du Pont in its dissolution with General Motors will now be in charge of awarding defense contracts and research funds to both, as well as to a hundred or so other corporations. Overnight, therefore, Clark Clifford becomes the most powerful figure in the Cabinet. Another column on his background and his problems will follow.

Cost of New Union Drive for 'Mental - Aid' in '70s Will Outzoom Price of Medicare - Medicaid in '60s.

Detroit: -- There has been many a surprising "first" in this auto city. But the most startling precedent here, now being watched by the American medical profession, is the car worker's right under his union contract to get free individual psychiatric care; electroshock therapy and anesthesia for such aid; treatment in a qualified outpatient clinic, night or day care center; and counseling by a psychologist for the disturbed employe and his family.

This has been in effect since Sept. 1, 1966, but has gone unnoticed by the general public. It is a pilot coverage which is expected to sweep the entire labor movement.

And such experts as Martin E. Segal, welfare and pension counselor to many cities, states and joint labor - management funds, predicts that mental health care will do for the '70s what medicare and medicaid have done in the '60s.

Mental care treatment and costs (now limited to $400 under the United Automobile Workers Union contract with the car manufacturers) will have even greater financial impact on the country than have the "free" medicaid, medicare, and labor contract welfare coverage.

"This mental - aid, if I can coin that phrase," said Segal, "is just starting to take hold. We'll see it full grown after the auto contract experience enables us to measure the costs of this vast phenomenon."

Even at a $400 limit, which includes individual psychiatric treatment by a qualified physician, the UAW coverage commits the health insurers to some $250 million annually, it is estimated here.

No doubt, in future negotiations, the present $400 ceiling will be jacked up. Millions of additional workers and their families will be included as more unions move in under the psychiatric umbrella when contracts expire.

At the moment, there are either a few experimental programs or small but fully advanced joint labor-management mental health plans in the men's clothing industry, in the retail trades, and among the unionized Meat Cutters and even New York City taxi drivers.

As a result of an experimental project run jointly by Jack Potofsky's Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the New York Clothing Manufacturing Assn., over 400 mentally disturbed employees have been treated. The psychiatrists, psychologists and regular physicians in charge have discovered that the blue collar worker lends himself more easily to treatment, adjusts more quickly, and recovers more swiftly than do the white collar people.

"These workers are people whose personal problems make it difficult for them to cope with the pressures, stresses and strains of day-to-day work," says a spokesman for the Sidney Hillman Health Center. "Without the program they probably would have either been laid off their jobs or not hired for a variety of valid reasons -- job hopping violent outbursts, high absenteeism, poor performance."

Mental health, say the experts, will have an even greater impact on the corollary institutions than medicare and medicaid. Thus the '70s will see the effect not only on hospitals, welfare departments, medical schools, health and welfare labor - management funds, and Blue Cross Insurance.

It will also have an impact on the "organization and practice of medicine, in community outpatient health centers, in the involvement of local government and citizens groups in financing and directing health institutions, and in the responsbility and recognition extended to non-medical specialists such as psychologists, social workers, psychiatric nurses, and rehabilitation specialists."

As these mental health insurance specialists see it, the first development will be the tapping of some of the labor and industry leaders who act as welfare fund trustees to serve on local and regional mental health boards.

These leaders then will carry into the labor negotiations and the union - management welfare fund trustees' meetings, their knowledge about the treatment of mental ailments.

They are expected to push for easier access by workers to such psychiatric and psychological care.

Then these insiders will become involved in financing the ever - expanding mental treatment centers as well as working more mental health care clauses into the labor contracts.

And in addition to lobbying at the mayor's office and at the state house for more funds for this special care, they'll also pressure the insurers such as Blue Shield and Blue Cross to pay more than is allowed now. The cost will sky-rocket as scores of millions of workers and their families are covered by mental health insurance as they now are for an appendectomy.

The mind will become a mighty expensive matter as psychiatry is placed within the working man's grasp.

Most college students stick to their knitting.

The hippies and the Vietnam war protest marchers are in the minority but they have marred the image of all collegians.

One of the most constructive moves undertaken to change this image is the decision by The Phoenix, student newspaper of the Queens College in New York, to send two correspondents to Vietnam.

Informing themselves first hand is a better approach than marching in the streets, sloganeering or even writing editorials about faraway events. The two correspondents will be the envy of all newspapermen, who haven't had the opportunity themselves to go directly to the war scene.

The Phoenix staff expected college authorities to object to the project but President Joseph P. McMurray gave his full support.

The students have raised enough money to send the two men to Vietnam but not enough to pay for the return trip. They plan to finance the trip back by syndicating articles in other college publications.

Some care must have been taken in selecting the students. An obvious effort was made to present a balanced picture.

Lee Dembart, a graduate student who already is on the way, has opposed the administration's war policies. He is a former managing editor of the Phoenix.

Ralph Paladino, who is scheduled to leave Thursday, has supported the administration's Vietnam policy.

Editors of student papers are the most draft conscious of any in the country. So they come by their militancy naturally.

Many have sympathized with student demonstrators against military recruiters, industrial suppliers of war materials and the selective service system. The Michigan Daily even has questioned the University of Michigan's participation in defense department research projects.

This militancy has dismayed college administrators, alumni, even many students.

The hope will be that in sending two students to Vietnam and by wide dissemination of their dispatches student editorial opinion will become more responsible, reasonable and be on more factual evidence than it has in the past.

Travel can be broadening.

Drivers who ignore traffic control devices make driving even more hazardous, and often cause the injury or death of an innocent driver or pdestrian.

Reporting last year's figures, the Traffic Safety Association of Detroit says that 33 persons were killed and more than 5,600 were injured in that city because some driver, either carelessly or deliberately, disregarded a traffic control device such as a stop sign, red light or yield sign.

Quoting Inspector Arthur Sonnenberg, head of Detroit's Accident Prevention Bureau, the association adds that the same type of violation caused 11 deaths and 3,000 injuries in the first eight months of 1967.

"The problem of disregarding traffic control devices is even more severe than the statistics indicate," says a spokesman for TSA. This is because many accidents are charged to a contributing cause, such as speeding, drunk driving or reckless driving, in mishaps involving right-of-way.

To combat the problem, the TSA has started a poster campaign to alert drivers to look and think twice at stop lights and signs. Featuring pictures of such control devices, the posters ask the question, "Will he?" meaning the other driver.

"You never know what the other driver will do when he encounters a traffic light or stop sign," says Inspector Sonnenberg. "He may be daydreaming or intentionally meaning to commit a violation.

"Although YOU know that YOU will obey the sign," adds Sonnenberg, "the other driver may not and you could find yourself in bad trouble."

To that, the Driver's Seat can only add, "Drive defensively -- watch out for the other guy!"

INFLATION AT A GLANCE

.Too much money in circulation caused huge demand for goods and services, creating shortages and higher prices. Now taking shape, increased costs due to shortages and recent wage hikes. Thus, two-pronged inflation -- demand pull and cost push.

.The average American had $10 less purchasing power in June than he had in January.

.Cost of living expected to increase 4% in 1966, that much more in 1967.

.Several big corporations ready themselves for a tax increase to the 51-52% range, from 48%. Plans for personal income tax hike being readied.

.New round of wage contract negotiations, coming up, expected to cost industry billions -- creating more cost push inflation pressure.

.No sign of cut in federal nondefense spending--a major cause of too much money in circulation--unless voters demand it at the polls.

.Wage and price control being seriously studied as an anti-inflationary device, for duration of war in Vietnam.

Mr. Charles Shuman, American Farm Bureau Federation President, says that the Administration is pursuing a "cheap food" policy which is hurting farmers and not helping consumers. "Producers of livestock (which has no supply management program) and soybeans (which generally sell for more than the support price) are already operating under a market system. In fact, two-thirds of agriculture which operate outside of government subsidy and control programs have done better than the controlled sector of farming," President Shuman says.

Recovery of the stock market has abated fears of a 1966 depression.

It now appears that such fears were never justified. At the grassroots of the American economy the probability of a serious recession was never accepted.

While stock prices were declining, production and distribution of consumer goods continued at an accelerated pace. The consumer had more relative buying power than at any time in history.

Confidence of retailers was reflected in the largest increase in newspaper advertising in recent years. There has been a corresponding rise in the volume of retail sales.

Indeed, retail sales for August, 1966, were 10 per cent higher than for August, 1965. Of course, such an increase in the demand for goods and services has resulted in higher prices for some products.

However, the buying power of the American consumer has far out-paced price increases. Production in key industries has mounted and gained in efficiency.

Neither serious inflation nor recession seems probable so long as ample goods are available to a public which has the wealth to buy on an unprecendented scale.

Perhaps what has confused market speculators and some economists has been the change in consumer buying habits which affected a few industries adversely. The goods that are selling on the burgeoning retail market today are not the same goods which sold in 1960. And by 1970 an entirely new complex of goods and services will be in demand.

Retailers who have been increasing advertising to meet changing demands have been prospering while the timid talk of recession and tight money.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cliff Robertson is a take a chance guy.

Although the handsome young actor has been one of the busiest and most successful performers in television, he felt that in none of his 13 movies had he been given a really great role.

"Some of them were pretty suffocating," he said. "So since the mountain wouldn't come to me, I decided to go to the mountain."

Five years ago he bought the film rights to a short story called "Flowers for Algernon," by Daniel Keyes. It is the touching story of a young bakery worker who aspires to lead a normal life but is handicapped by the fact he has an intelligence quotient of only 59.

Retitled "Charly"— that's how the retarded boy spells his name— the film will be released by ABC-Paramount in a few months.

"I've had this story in my guts for five long years," said Cliff, who worked on the writing of the screen play and also beat on Hollywood's golden doors until he found a financial sponsor.

"I may not make a nickel out of it, but I'll at least have the satisfaction of having done it. I didn't want to be the kind of a guy who 20 years from now would be sitting around saying to himself, 'If only I— .'"

Actually, Robertson is probably overcritical of his own work in films. His screen credits include "Picnic", "PT-109," "The Best Man," and "The Honey Pot."

But he did get a little vexed at having some of the best roles he played on television or Broadway wind up on the screen being played by Jack Lemmon, Paul Newman, and Marlon Brando, friendly as he happens to be with each of them.

"I felt like I was often a bridesmaid, but never the bride," he said. "My career has been one of defensive fighting. Now I've got a chance for the knockout."

Since youth Robertson has led a life of knockabout adventure and variety. At the age of nine he was working a newspaper route in his native La Jolla, Calif.

At 14 he was doing odd jobs around an airport in exchange for free flying lessons. At 16 he was a seaman aboard a cargo ship in the Pacific when it was bombed by a Japanese plane.

While attending Antioch (Ohio) College, he wrote a radio column and served as an announcer. During the later years of World War II he was a junior Navy officer aboard ammunition ships in Atlantic and Mediterranean combat areas.

Determined to follow a theatrical career, Cliff studied at the Actors Studio here, earning his way as a bus boy, waiter, stevedore, and taxi driver. His first professional success was with an acting group that toured the Catskills Mountain resorts. His pay: $5 a week and room and board.

It doesn't sound possible, but it's true. The Missouri State Highway Patrol reports that 787 pedestrians lost their lives in traffic from 1963 to 1967.

Records of the Patrol show that the highest number of pedestrian deaths in Missouri during this five year period occurred in 1965 when 174 persons were killed. The next highest pedestrian toll was recorded last year with 172. The years 1963, 1964 and 1966 recorded 141, 140 and 160 pedestrian deaths, respectively.

"This is a distressing number of pedestrian traffic deaths," declared Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, Superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol," especially when you consider that just a little more alertness on the part of the involved motorists and pedestrians may have prevented many of these tragedies."

The Patrol Superintendent pointed out that the business of pedestrian safety is a two-way proposition involving the motorist and pedestrian. Both must have a realistic awareness of each other's problems and work together in a common endeavor to reduce the heavy pedestrian traffic toll.

"A driver should expect a pedestrian to have faulty judgment in estimating the speed of an automobile, in figuring how well the driver can see him, and in determining how long it will take him to bring the car to a stop," Hockaday stated. "In the same way, a pedestrian should never assume that just because he can see the approaching car, the driver can see him.

"If both drivers and pedestrians would recognize these limitations of one another, and at the same time expect the unexpected, many pedestrian accidents could be prevented," he concluded.

HILL 875--WHAT PLACE IN HISTORY?

Hill 875 takes its place alongside the names of all the other battles in all the other wars in which American fighting men have distinguished themselves.

Having said that, however, it is impossible at this moment to estimate what importance military historians will give it when they come to write the final history of the Vietnam war.

The fighting in the Dak To region of South Vietnam did not take place along a front that can be neatly drawn on a map. It was not part of a general offensive aimed at piercing the enemy's lines and sweeping his armies back in confusion.

The enemy is everywhere in South Vietnam, and the battles against him erupt from one end of the country to the other.

It is ironic that at the height of this battle -- the most fiercely fought thus far -- General Westmoreland was telling the American people that the war was entering a phase in which "the end begins to come into view," a phase in which the South Vietnamese begin to assume the brunt of the struggle and the United States begins to reduce its forces.

From the statistics alone, it was an allied victory. The four North Vietnamese regiments engaged lost an estimated 1,377 dead and an unknown number wounded. American casualties were 274 dead and 939 wounded. South Vietnamese: about 75 dead and 200 wounded.

The casualty figures from Dak To could tell another story -- that the enemy, far from weakening, is fighting more confidently than ever.

SOME CONSUMER PROTECTION PLEASE

Spokesmen for the antitrust division of the Department of Justice have indicated that they do not envision a broad scale program imposing limitations on advertising. But, at the same time, there continues in official circles the underlying belief that advertising results in higher prices. Nothing could be further from the truth. Advertising builds sales volume and lower unit costs. Consumers benefit in lower prices, abundance and variety in the marketplace.

Despite fine-spun theories to the contrary, excessive federal straitjacketing of the merchandising process would guarantee scarcity, higher prices, disruption of production and employment and bankruptcy for a good many of our newspapers and periodicals. With this type of thinking in official circles, consumers may need protection, but it certainly isn't from advertising.

ACTION NEEDED IN 1968

The second session of the 90th U. S. Congress, which will be convened on January 15, can perform a great service to the Republic by approving for submission to the states a proposed constitutional a mendment reforming the Electoral College system by adoption of the Congressional District Plan. This plan is fair, equitable and in accord with the reasoned sentiments of the founders of freedom in America.

Under the Congressional District Plan, both major political parties would necessarily nominate the best available candidates for electors. The qualifications and attributes of each of the candidates would be well known to the voters of his district. Candidates for the two electors at large from each state could be better known than candidates for governor and other state offices.

Their high caliber would make them useful in a number of capacities during the campaign. They would contribute to the reputation of their party and its precepts and principles. They would add to the acceptability of every party candidate for office.

Adoption of the Congressional District Plan would preserve the Electoral College, which is based on tenets considered fundamental by the authors of our Federal Constitution. In operation it would be a strong force for the preservation of our Republic and the individual liberties which Americans regard as their inalienable right.

There is no possibility that the plan can be adopted in time for its use in the 1968 elections. Its submission is not a partisan matter. The best interests of the people will be served by early congressional approval of the plan. HLH

About the only difference in a full grown dictatorship and conditions in our nation as of today is in the dictatorship. A protestor risks facing a firing squad at sunrise, while at present protests by our people just runs off like water on a duck's back and that means only one thing -- the people have lost control and that's the first phase of a vicious dictatorship that in a short while, if left run, can order no protests or face the consequences.

But the most startling precedent here, now being watched by the American medical profession, is the car worker's right under his union contract to get free individual psychiatric care; electroshock therapy and anesthesia for such aid; treatment in a qualified outpatient clinic, night or day care center; and counseling by a psychologist for the disturbed employe and his family.

This has been in effect since Sept. 1, 1966, but has gone unnoticed by the general public. It is a pilot coverage which is expected to sweep the entire labor movement.

And such experts as Martin E. Segal, welfare and pension counselor to many cities, states and joint labor - management funds, predicts that mental health care will do for the '70s what medicare and medicaid have done in the '60s.

Mental care treatment and costs (now limited to $400 under the United Automobile Workers Union contract with the car manufacturers) will have even greater financial impact on the country than have the "free" medicaid, medicare, and labor contract welfare coverage.

"This mental - aid, if I can coin that phrase," said Segal, "is just starting to take hold. We'll see it full grown after the auto contract experience enables us to measure the costs of this vast phenomenon."

Even at a $400 limit, which includes individual psychiatric treatment by a qualified physician, the UAW coverage commits the health insurers to some $250 million annually, it is estimated here.

No doubt, in future negotiations, the present $400 ceiling will be jacked up. Millions of additional workers and their families will be included as more unions move in under the psychiatric umbrella when contracts expire.

At the moment, there are either a few experimental programs or small but fully advanced joint labor-management mental health plans in the men's clothing industry, in the retail trades, and among the unionized Meat Cutters and even New York City taxi drivers.

As a result of an experimental project run jointly by Jack Potofsky's Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the New York Clothing Manufacturing Assn., over 400 mentally disturbed employees have been treated. The psychiatrists, psychologists and regular physicians in charge have discovered that the blue collar worker lends himself more easily to treatment, adjusts more quickly, and recovers more swiftly than do the white collar people.

"These workers are people whose personal problems make it difficult for them to cope with the pressures, stresses and strains of day-to-day work," says a spokesman for the Sidney Hillman Health Center. "Without the program they probably would have either been laid off their jobs or not hired for a variety of valid reasons -- job hopping violent outbursts, high absenteeism, poor performance."

Mental health, say the experts, will have an even greater impact on the corollary institutions than medicare and medicaid. Thus the '70s will see the effect not only on hospitals, welfare departments, medical schools, health and welfare labor-management funds, and Blue Cross Insurance.

It will also have an impact on the "organization and practice of medicine, in community outpatient health centers, in the involvement of local government and citizens groups in financing and directing health institutions, and in the responsbility and recognition extended to nonmedical specialists such as psychologists, social workers, psychiatric nurses, and rehabilitation specialists."

As these mental health insurance specialists see it, the first development will be the tapping of some of the labor and industry leaders who act as welfare fund trustees to serve on local and regional mental health boards.

These leaders then will carry into the labor negotiations and the union - management welfare fund trustees' meetings, their knowledge about the treatment of mental ailments.

They are expected to push for easier access by workers to such psychiatric and psychological care.

Then these insiders will become involved in financing the ever - expanding mental treatment centers as well as working more mental health care clauses into the labor contracts.

And in addition to lobbying at the mayor's office and at the state house for more funds for this special care, they'll also pressure the insurers such as Blue Shield and Blue Cross to pay more than is allowed now. The cost will sky-rocket as scores of millions of workers and their families are covered by mental health insurance as they now are for an appendectomy.

The mind will become a mighty expensive matter as psychiatry is placed within the working man's grasp.

Dior Hikes Hemlines

PARIS AP - Dior hiked skirts four to five inches above the knees today for most daytime wear as the couture house displayed spring and summer models with expert tailoring and a heavy accent on jewels and other glittering decor.

Even some evening dresses displayed plenty of above-the-knee leg. These were hostess gowns, with a cross-over surplice line which dipped to the floor in back but ran up sometimes as high as 10 inches above the knee in front.

Dior also concentrated on the overblouse, showing it in various lengths from Russian blouse length to tunic length. There were pockets for daytime and jewels for evening, running through the entire collection.

For some sleeves, Dior borrowed from the ladies of King Arthur's court. There were also turn-of-the-century leg o'mutton sleeves, and some had a flashed petal effect.

Dior's overblouses run through the day and evening. They are tailored to about an inch over the average hip length for day, which is the Russian blouse look that many of them have. The tunic length is wrist length and sometimes thumb length. The latter step through cocktail and evening with sparse decor or elaborate jewelled embroidery in gold and mock precious stones.

For daytime, one of the best Russian overblouses is in brick red shantung treated to tailored pockets and worn with a Dior moonlight blue tussah shantung Bermuda with its own reversible raincoat on short wide line.

Dior's designer, Marc Bohan, pays the greatest attention to his little daytime suits. They all have cardigan or blazer jackets, worn open. The cardigans have rounded corners; the blazers are cut straight, and every edge on the jacket, skirt or sheath is either cuffed, edged or bound in a two-inch band of white.

Desi Arnaz IV Now Teen-ager

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fifteen years ago Friday, television's most famous baby was born. His name: Desiderio Arnaz IV.

Today the son of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz is a strapping teen-ager who looms taller than his father and — according to his proud pa — can beat a better bongo.

It was on Jan. 19, 1953, that the birth of young Desi coincided with the arrival of a son to the Ricky Ricardos of "I Love Lucy," the nation's most popular television show.

"The story made headlines in every newspaper in the country," recalled Desi Sr. "I never realized how big a story it was until I played golf with President Eisenhower about four years ago down at Palm Desert.

"He asked me how my son was, and I was surprised he knew about Desi. 'Do I!' said Ike. 'That little so-and-so knocked me off the front pages on the day before my inauguration.' "

Time passed, and Lucille and Desi broke up as an acting team and pair. He carried on the Desilu empire, then retired and handed the presidency to his ex-wife. Now she has sold out the studios, and he is back in television as producer-director of "The Mothers-In-Law." Both have remarried but they remain friendly.

"Desi is a fine boy; Lucille has done a good job of bringing him up," said the elder Arnaz in his office at the studio he once owned. "And he's doing fine in the music world. I think he earned more money than I did last year."

The lad is part of the rock 'n' roll team of Dino, Desi and Billy, which made a hit with the young crowd three years ago and remains a popular act. The other members are Dino Martin, son of Dean, and Billy Henshe.

"Even though we don't live together," said Arnaz, "I talk to Desi every day on the phone. He asks me for advice on his music career and other things.

"Dean and I and the other father have an agreement about the boys. As long as they keep up their grades and play dates only on their school holidays, they can go on with the act. But I told Desi, 'I don't want a stupid drummer in the family.' He knows that if his average falls below 85 per cent, he'll have to quit the act."

The Desis, Sr. and Jr., made their first appearance together Jan. 14 on "The Mothers-In-Law" and concluded the two-part show last Sunday.

Robert Kennedy Gives Ice Skating Party

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy treated some 200 associates, members of his staff and their children to a gay ice skating party at the Rockefeller Center rink Wednesday night.

Almost everyone followed the senator's example in donning ice skates and swooping around the rink.

Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, wearing a navy blue minidress, blue tights and a brief gray fur coat, skated with historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. who ignored the cold in a blue pin stripe suit and red bow tie.

Jose Torres, a former light-heavyweight boxing champion, stepped gingerly onto the ice proclaiming that this was his first attempt at ice skating.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A $250,496 suit against actor Hal March has been settled out of court.

The suit was filed in connection with the drowning last May of Carol Doff, 5, in a swimming pool at March's Beverly Hills home.

The child was the daughter of Aron "Red" Doff, actor Mickey Rooney's manager.

The settlement, announced Wednesday in Santa Monica Superior Court, was for an undisclosed amount.

Accused of Running Shoplifter School

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — A Muskegon grandmother and her daughter, accused of running a "shoplifter school" for youngsters, were free on bond today on felony charges of larceny in a building.

The two women — Genevieve Nichols, 53, and her daughter, Betty Keller, 29 — were arrested Saturday along with six children, ages 2 to 14.

They were taken into custody after a private security guard followed them through five stores, police said. Several articles of clothing and merchandise were recovered from beneath the seat of the women's car, officers reported.

Five of the children were daughters of Mrs. Keller and granddaughters of Mrs. Nichols, police said, while the other was a nephew of the Kellers.

The grandmother and mother were running a "shoplifter school," said Muskegon Township Police Chief Donald Robbins. "They were teaching them to steal," he added.

The children were released to the custody of their fathers.

Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Keller demanded examination Monday at their Municipal Court arraignments. No date was set.

Trend Toward Buying Bigger Beds

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Queen-size, king-size and king extra long beds are crowding regular-size beds out of the bedroom.

That's the word from the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers which reports that 40 times as many big beds were sold last year as were sold 10 years ago.

The big beds accounted for 20 percent of sales last year against less than one half of one per cent in 1957.

Extra-size beds aren't new but the demand for them is.

"Young couples aren't thinking of anything other than kings or queens," says Elaine Bornheutter, president of Hale's Bedding Stores, Inc., in New York City.

Why? People are bigger, they want to be more comfortable and the bigger bed is becoming a prestige item, according to the manufacturers.

Twenty per cent of American men are 6 feet tall or taller against only 4 per cent in 1900. Since 1960 the average man has become seven pounds heavier and the average woman 11 pounds heavier.

The standard double bed size is 54 by 75 inches. The queen is 60 by 80, the king 76 by 80 and the king extra long 76 by 84.

Manufacturers expect the interest in bigger beds to push sales this year over the $1 billion mark for the first time. Last year's sales were estimated at $950 million.

And there's another, though smaller, trend in the offing: odd-shaped beds. Among these are round beds and beds made in the shape of a heart, a piano and, for one Long Island couple that shopped at Hale's, a teardrop.

Dior Hikes Hemlines

PARIS AP - Dior hiked skirts four to five inches above the knees today for most daytime wear as the couture house displayed spring and summer models with expert tailoring and a heavy accent on jewels and other glittering decor.

Even some evening dresses displayed plenty of above-the-knee leg. These were hostess gowns, with a cross-over surplice line which dipped to the floor in back but ran up sometimes as high as 10 inches above the knee in front.

Dior also concentrated on the overblouse, showing it in various lengths from Russian blouse length to tunic length. There were pockets for daytime and jewels for evening, running through the entire collection.

For some sleeves, Dior borrowed from the ladies of King Arthur's court. There were also turn-of-the-century leg o'mutton sleeves, and some had a flashed petal effect.

Dior's overblouses run through the day and evening. They are tailored to about an inch over the average hip length for day, which is the Russian blouse look that many of them have. The tunic length is wrist length and sometimes thumb length. The latter step through cocktail and evening with sparse decor or elaborate jewelled embroidery in gold and mock precious stones.

For daytime, one of the best Russian overblouses is in brick red shantung treated to tailored pockets and worn with a Dior moonlight blue tussah shantung Bermuda with its own reversible raincoat on short wide line.

Dior's designer, Marc Bohan, pays the greatest attention to his little daytime suits. They all have cardigan or blazer jackets, worn open. The cardigans have rounded corners; the blazers are cut straight, and every edge on the jacket, skirt or sheath is either cuffed, edged or bound in a two-inch band of white.

Desi Arnaz IV Now Teen-ager

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fifteen years ago Friday, television's most famous baby was born. His name: Desiderio Arnaz IV.

Today the son of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz is a strapping teen-ager who looms taller than his father and — according to his proud pa — can beat a better bongo.

It was on Jan. 19, 1953, that the birth of young Desi coincided with the arrival of a son to the Ricky Ricardos of "I Love Lucy," the nation's most popular television show.

"The story made headlines in every newspaper in the country," recalled Desi Sr. "I never realized how big a story it was until I played golf with President Eisenhower about four years ago down at Palm Desert.

"He asked me how my son was, and I was surprised he knew about Desi. 'Do I?' said Ike. 'That little so-and-so knocked me off the front pages on the day before my inauguration.'"

Time passed, and Lucille and Desi broke up as an acting team and pair. He carried on the Desilu empire, then retired and handed the presidency to his ex-wife. Now she has sold out the studios, and he is back in television as producer-director of "The Mothers-In-Law." Both have remarried but they remain friendly.

"Desi is a fine boy; Lucille has done a good job of bringing him up," said the elder Arnaz in his office at the studio he once owned. "And he's doing fine in the music world. I think he earned more money than I did last year."

The lad is part of the rock 'n' roll team of Dino, Desi and Billy, which made a hit with the young crowd three years ago and remains a popular act. The other members are Dino Martin, son of Dean, and Billy Henshe.

"Even though we don't live together," said Arnaz, "I talk to Desi every day on the phone. He asks me for advice on his music career and other things.

"Dean and I and the other father have an agreement about the boys. As long as they keep up their grades and play dates only on their school holidays, they can go on with the act. But I told Desi, 'I don't want a stupid drummer in the family.' He knows that if his average falls below 85 per cent, he'll have to quit the act."

The Desis, Sr. and Jr., made their first appearance together Jan. 14 on "The Mothers-In-Law" and concluded the two-part show last Sunday.

Robert Kennedy Gives Ice Skating Party

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy treated some 200 associates, members of his staff and their children to a gay ice skating party at the Rockefeller Center rink Wednesday night.

Almost everyone followed the senator's example in donning ice skates and swooping around the rink.

Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, wearing a navy blue minidress, blue tights and a brief gray fur coat, skated with historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. who ignored the cold in a blue pin stripe suit and red bow tie.

Jose Torres, a former light-heavyweight boxing champion, stepped gingerly onto the ice proclaiming that this was his first attempt at ice skating.

The suit was filed in connection with the drowning last May of Carol Doff, 5, in a swimming pool at March's Beverly Hills home.

The child was the daughter of Aron "Red" Doff, actor Mickey Rooney's manager.

The settlement, announced Wednesday in Santa Monica Superior Court, was for an undisclosed amount.

Accused of Running Shoplifter School

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — A Muskegon grandmother and her daughter, accused of running a "shoplifter school" for youngsters, were free on bond today on felony charges of larceny in a building.

The two women — Genevieve Nichols, 53, and her daughter, Betty Keller, 29 — were arrested Saturday along with six children, ages 2 to 14.

They were taken into custody after a private security guard followed them through five stores, police said. Several articles of clothing and merchandise were recovered from beneath the seat of the women's car, officers reported.

Five of the children were daughters of Mrs. Keller and granddaughters of Mrs. Nichols, police said, while the other was a nephew of the Kellers.

The grandmother and mother were running a "shoplifter school," said Muskegon Township Police Chief Donald Robbins. "They were teaching them to steal," he added.

The children were released to the custody of their fathers.

Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Keller demanded examination Monday at their Municipal Court arraignments. No date was set.

Trend Toward Buying Bigger Beds

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Queen-size, king-size and king extra long beds are crowding regular-size beds out of the bedroom.

That's the word from the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers which reports that 40 times as many big beds were sold last year as were sold 10 years ago.

The big beds accounted for 20 percent of sales last year against less than one half of one per cent in 1957.

Extra-size beds aren't new but the demand for them is.

"Young couples aren't thinking of anything other than kings or queens," says Elaine Bornheutter, president of Hale's Bedding Stores, Inc., in New York City.

Why? People are bigger, they want to be more comfortable and the bigger bed is becoming a prestige item, according to the manufacturers.

Twenty per cent of American men are 6 feet tall or taller against only 4 per cent in 1900. Since 1960 the average man has become seven pounds heavier and the average woman 11 pounds heavier.

The standard double bed size is 54 by 75 inches. The queen is 60 by 80, the king 76 by 80 and the king extra long 76 by 84.

Manufacturers expect the interest in bigger beds to push sales this year over the $1 billion mark for the first time. Last year's sales were estimated at $950 million.

And there's another, though smaller, trend in the offing: odd-shaped beds. Among these are round beds and beds made in the shape of a heart, a piano and, for one Long Island couple that shopped at Hale's, a teardrop.

Oran Meets Ky., Ill. Squads

Oran, the district's number one rated team with a 20-2 record, goes on a two-day road trip starting Friday night. It goes to Vienna, Ill., to take on coach Gilliam Guthrie's 2-8 ball club.

Guthrie, former coach at Bell City high school and junior high coach at Parma and Essex, is in a rebuilding year after having two excellent seasons his first two years there.

Coach Gene Bess' Oran Eagles will go against one of the biggest teams they will have to face perhaps all season in the encounter Friday night.

Guthrie starts three juniors, all over 6-3 and one senior at six foot and one senior at 5-8.

Oran decisively beat the Vienna squad at Oran last year by 15 points but will be facing the Southern Illinois' fifth leading scorer in Dale White, who is rolling along at a 26-point average.

The second game on the trip has the Eagles journeying to Lone Oak, Ky., where they will take on the Western Kentucky's seventh rated club, which has an 8-6 record, two of those losses coming at the hands of Paducah Tillman, one time by six points and the other by 11.

Lona Oak will start a senior ball club as it will mark the first time both teams have met.

Loan Oak will have the height advantage on the Eagles with a 6-5 center and a pair of 6-2 forwards, but lost its best players, a 6-5 senior to Madison, Ind., who is third in the state. The player, Larry Jackson, is one of its starting forwards.

Oran, which has lost but two will send into the game its usual lineup of Fred and John Johnson, Rodndy LeGrand, Don Evans and either Elbert or Robert Williams.

Fred Johnson is one of the leading scorers in the district with a 20.8 average in the Eagles 22 games.

On the homefront two tournament finals will be held Friday at Poplar Bluff and Zelma and a pair of finals are set for Saturday at New Madrid and Bloomfield.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

Tournament action resumes at Poplar Bluff tonight where the district's top four class L basketball powers resume their battle for the championship of the Poplar Bluff invitational.

Tonight's first game pits the top - seeded Mules against Charleston at 7 p.m. Poplar Bluff has won two previous encounters against the Jays.

Kennett, third seeded, faces the falling Sikeston Bulldogs in the 8:30 p.m. nightcap in hopes of revenging an earlier loss to the Dogs in the Bloomfield tournament.

We hit our only call of last night but face another one of the nights where one can't tell who will win. . .and may just end up wrong either way he goes. . .but we'll try our hand at it.

Bloomfield Tournament

Richland vs. Bell City --Would you believe an upset??? we would . . .Bell City has the momentum after trimming the host Bloomfield unit and will roll into the finals. Bell City 58, Richland 56.

Poplar Bluff Tourney

Poplar Bluff vs. Charleston--The Mules are awful hard to whip on their own floor. . . . Charleston seems to be finally coming into its own and remember. . .right here is where the Jays started off last season and ended up at Washington University in St. Louis in the quarterfinals of the state class L tourney. We think the Jays are ready and with the added scoring of guard Charlie Babb. . the Jays will win. Charleston 66, Poplar Bluff 64.

Sikeston vs. Kennett -- defense . . .that's one thing a team needs if it's going to win constantly and it needs it constantly to win. Sikeston has been playing little defense lately. . . and especially the big men. . . It'll be to the consolation finals Sikeston tonight. Kennett 71, Sikeston 64.

How about that. . .we've picked all upsets. . .now watch those seeded teams take easy wins. . . but we think not. . .too easy.

Members of the Daily Standard sports panel will meet Feb. 17 at Lubers Cafe to select the coach of the year, rookie coach of the year, Daily Standard all-star team and an all-Southeast Missouri academic team.

These coaches. . .from all over Southeast Missouri have assisted in selection of each week's Daily Standard basketball poll.

Coaches will receive information in the mail shortly about the meeting.

We appreciate the co-operation extended us by the many area coaches. . .who take time out to help us on our selections and to call in the results of their games. . .won or lost. . . each night.

Last year's winners of the trophies were Gary Wadlington of Charleston for the "coach of the year," Dale Harrison of Parma and now of Portageville for the "rookie coach of the year" and Matthews was the top team.

Now that the end of the season is drawing nearer. . .it seems that everyone has already started talking about the class M regional tournament at Illmo-Scott City where four of last week's top teams will be entered.

Those four. . .Scott Central, Oran, Matthews and Notre Dame. . .have lost only seven games combines so far this season with Matthews boosting the best record of the group at 21-1.

Recalling recent years. . .we can't remember when the district has sported so many well-matched teams. . .by that we mean anyone can beat the other on any given night. That has been proved as Oran has beaten by Notre Dame and Matthews has suffered its only loss to Oran.

Back in my days. . .that's not many back. . .the dominating power was the Rebels. . .and they truly were dominating. . .beating everyone 15 or 20 points and some teams such as Parma. . . 30. . .that's the team I played on. . .Those were the good old days.

Whoever wins the regional at ISC. . .we are sure they will be one of the finest teams to come out of the Southeast District and represent us. . .

What they should let us do. . . is pick an all-star team from the tournament entries and let them advance to the state. . .

Good luck to all the teams during the remainder of the season!

Some deer hunters have a vacation problem; so to accomodate them, the Conservation Commission has set opening day for two years ahead.

The Commission said a Saturday opening in mid-November seems acceptable to most deer hunters. Opening dates cannot be established permanently because the Commission needs flexibility to meet possibly changing conditions.

The Commission set the openings for Nov. 16, 1968, and Nov. 15, 1969.

The reason for setting the season so far ahead is to permit hunters to arrange for vacations if necessary.

The Senate expressed its gratitude today to the outdoor writers of Missouri, who will hold their annual meeting at Branson May 3-5.

Bill Potter of Joplin is president of the group, which was praised for its dissemination of information about the natural beauties which have made tourism the state's second largest industry, according to Sen. Richard M. Webster, R- Carthage.

Webster introduced the resolution that passed unanimously.

Scott-Mississippi Showdown Set

The district's top rated Oran Eagles head the list of eight Scott-Mississippi basketball conference teams with a 5-0 slate but are closely pursued by the third ranked Scott County Central Braves with a 4-0 mark.

Both will meet headon Tuesday night at Oran, marking the fourth time that both teams have met. Scott County holds the edge 2-1, but last week lost to the Eagles in the championship game of the conference tournament.

Oran rang up its 20th win of the season with a rousing conference win over Kelly Tuesday night while Scott County notched its fourth by routing East Prairie.

Scott County Central is 18-2 with two tournament titles under its tepee. The Braves started on their championship trip by beating Oran in the finals of the Eagles tournament. They repeated the win over the Eagles in the Cape Girardeau tournament where they handed Notre Dame its first setback. . .

But sickness struck the club early after the tournament break at Christmas and the team has to get back into its earlier playing form.

Delta's Bobcats, third place finisher in the Scott-Mississippi conference tourney, is third in league standings with a 2-2 mark. They were ranked seventh in the district during the tourney.

Scott County Central's junior varsity squad, which claimed the B division title in the conference tournament, holds a 4-0 league record and will settle the conference title when it goes to Oran Tuesday.

Oran Meets Ky., Ill. Squads

Oran, the district's number one rated team with a 20-2 record, goes on a two-day road trip starting Friday night. It goes to Vienna, Ill., to take on coach Gilliam Guthrie's 2-8 ball club.

Guthrie, former coach at Bell City high school and junior high coach at Parma and Essex, is in a rebuilding year after having two excellent seasons his first two years there.

Coach Gene Bess' Oran Eagles will go against one of the biggest teams they will have to face perhaps all season in the encounter Friday night.

Guthrie starts three juniors, all over 6-3 and one junior at six foot and one senior at 5-8.

Oran decisively beat the Vienna squad at Oran last year by 15 points but will be facing the Southern Illinois' fifth leading scorer in Dale White, who is rolling along at a 26-point average.

The second game on the trip has the Eagles journeying to Lone Oak, Ky., where they will take on the Western Kentucky's seventh rated club, which has an 8-6 record, two of those losses coming at the hands of Paducah Tillman, one time by six points and the other by 1l.

Lona Oak will start a senior ball club as it will mark the first time both teams have met.

Loan Oak will have the height advantage on the Eagles with a 6-5 center and a pair of 6-2 forwards, but lost its best players, a 6-5 senior to Madison, Ind., who is third in the state. The player, Larry Jackson, is one of its starting forwards.

Oran, which has lost but two will send into the game its usual lineup of Fred and John Johnson, Rodndy LeGrand, Don Evans and either Elbert or Robert Williams.

Fred Johnson is one of the leading scorers in the district with a 20.8 average in the Eagles 22 games.

On the homefront two tournament finals will be held Friday at Poplar Bluff and Zelma and a pair of finals are set for Saturday at New Madrid and Bloomfield.

Tournament action resumes at Poplar Bluff tonight where the district's top four class L. basketball powers resume their battle for the championship of the Poplar Bluff invitational.

Tonight's first game pits the top - seeded Mules against Charleston at 7 p.m. Poplar Bluff has won two previous encounters against the Jays.

Kennett, third seeded, faces the falling Sikeston Bulldogs in the 8:30 p.m. nightcap in hopes of revenging an earlier loss to the Dogs in the Bloomfield tournament.

We hit our only call of last night but face another one of the nights where one can't tell who will win. . .and may just end up wrong either way he goes. . .but we'll try our hand at it.

Bloomfield Tournament

Richland vs. Bell City --Would you believe an upset??? we would . . .Bell City has the momentum after trimming the host Bloomfield unit and will roll into the finals. Bell City 58, Richland 56.

Poplar Bluff Tourney

Poplar Bluff vs. Charleston--The Mules are awful hard to whip on their own floor. . . . Charleston seems to be finally coming into its own and remember. . .right here is where the Jays started off last season and ended up at Washington University in St. Louis in the quarterfinals of the state class L tourney. We think the Jays are ready and with the added scoring of guard Charlie Babb. . the Jays will win. Charleston 66, Poplar Bluff 64.

Sikeston vs. Kennett -- defense . . .that's one thing a team needs if it's going to win constantly and it needs it constantly to win. Sikeston has been playing little defense lately. . . and especially the big men. . . It'll be to the consolation finals Sikeston tonight. Kennett 71, Sikeston 64.

How about that. . .we've picked all upsets. . .now watch those seeded teams take easy wins. . . but we think not. . .too easy.

Members of the Daily Standard sports panel will meet Feb. 17 at Lubers Cafe to select the coach of the year, rookie coach of the year, Daily Standard all-star team and an all-Southeast Missouri academic team.

These coaches. . .from all over Southeast Missouri have assisted in selection of each week's Daily Standard basketball poll.

Coaches will receive information in the mail shortly about the meeting.

We appreciate the co-operation extended us by the many area coaches. . .who take time out to help us on our selections and to call in the results of their games. . .won or lost. . . each night.

Last year's winners of the trophies were Gary Wadlington of Charleston for the "coach of the year," Dale Harrison of Parma and now of Portageville for the "rookie coach of the year" and Matthews was the top team.

Now that the end of the season is drawing nearer. . .it seems that everyone has already started talking about the class M regional tournament at Illmo-Scott City where four of last week's top teams will be entered.

Those four. . .Scott Central, Oran, Matthews and Notre Dame. . .have lost only seven games combines so far this season with Matthews boosting the best record of the group at 21-1.

Recalling recent years. . .we can't remember when the district has sported so many well-matched teams. . .by that we mean anyone can beat the other on any given night. That has been proved as Oran has beaten by Notre Dame and Matthews has suffered its only loss to Oran.

Back in my days. . .that's not many back. . .the dominating power was the Rebels. . .and they truly were dominating. . .beating everyone 15 or 20 points and some teams such as Parma. . . 30. . .that's the team I played on. . .Those were the good old days.

Whoever wins the regional at ISC. . .we are sure they will be one of the finest teams to come out of the Southeast District and represent us. . .

What they should let us do. . . is pick an all-star team from the tournament entries and let them advance to the state. . .

Good luck to all the teams during the remainder of the season!

Some deer hunters have a vacation problem; so to accomodate them, the Conservation Commission has set opening day for two years ahead.

The Commission said a Saturday opening in mid-November seems acceptable to most deer hunters. Opening dates cannot be established permanently because the Commission needs flexibility to meet possibly changing conditions.

The Commission set the openings for Nov. 16, 1968, and Nov. 15, 1969.

The reason for setting the season so far ahead is to permit hunters to arrange for vacations if necessary.

The Senate expressed its gratitude today to the outdoor writers of Missouri, who will hold their annual meeting at Branson May 3-5.

Bill Potter of Joplin is president of the group, which was praised for its dissemination of information about the natural beauties which have made tourism the state's second largest industry, according to Sen. Richard M. Webster, R- Carthage.

Webster introduced the resolution that passed unanimously.

To the Editor
The Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

Dear Sir:

Abraham Lincoln voiced the warning - "If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher." Our external enemies pale to insignificance when compared to the United Nations (our internal enemy). This bankrupt institution was founded on a fallacious premise; that the Soviet Union would cooperate with the United States to assure a peaceful world. It is disquieting to hear our Officials refer to the U.N. as the 'cornerstone of American policy' and 'the last great hope for peace.'

The United Nations, under the indispensable U. Thant, is the worst cancer over diagnosed in the body of any country throughout all history. No investigation is necessary, the record is clear; it should be abolished completely, and at once. Yet, inversely, the effort is made to make 'national' and 'sovereignty' dirty words, Internationalism is the 'thing' and Nationalism is downgraded.

We must resist, even at the risk of being labeled super or ultra patriots. If a paralyzed Congress will not act the people through their sovereign states must repeal the acts of their Washington representatives. The States can individually and collectively repeal the United Nations World Police State.

Yours truly,
Robert C. Baker

Missouri needs new laws protecting personal property.

The Scott County Court owes me - Charles Hampton and my mother, $10,826.99, since Oct. 14-1955. Here's how it come to be; the Scott County Road construction crew was building a road between Grant City and the Blodgett Route H, while clearing the right of way. Some of the employees bulldo zed a big pile of trees in front of our barn, my mother had warned those men not to burn those trees there, but they set them on fire anyway, and the wind shifted, sitting the barn and all the contents on fire.

It being the fall of year, I had this barn full of hay, corn, feed, seed, irrigation equipment, cultivators, fertilizer equipment and so on. The heat was so terrific that it burned two tractors, wheat drill & trailers, three to four hundred feet away, we nearly lost our house too.

The County Court met at our farm that afternoon and said, figure up the damages and come to Benton and we will reimburse you.

In the meantime the county attorney informed the court that they couldn't legally pay this claim, however the court did pay for fixing one tractor and wheat drill and they gave me some cash amounting to approximately twleve hundred dollars.

The Scott County Court says if the Missouri Legislatures will pass a law (effecting Scott County only) that they will pay this long over due bill.

I would like to point out that the County Highway Dept. was acting as contractors, as this was a State Aid Farm to market road, financed by the State from gas tax, therefore I think that they should be liable for law suit just like any contractor.

I would like to bring out the fact that the barn that was destroyed in this fire is not included in this $10,826.99. Fortunately, we did have fifteen hundreds dollars insurance on it, however in this day and time, a barn like that would cost approximately fifteen thousand dollars.

I have written governors, congressman, senators and representatives without any success.

I would appreciate it if anyone who reads this would take a few minutes of their time and write their representative, and ask them to pass laws that would protect your personal property from negligent people that work for our counties cities and state.

GOD GIVE US MEN

Men of the calibre of our Founding Fathers - who - in their Declaration of Independence-with a "firm reliance upon the protection of Divine Providence, mututally pledged to each other, their lives, fortunes and Sacred Honor" - to free their independent States - of all political connection between them and the MONARCHIAL control of Great Britain.

Today - there are such Christian men - with material wealth-God-believing, Constitutional - believing, national solvency - believing, national independence-believing, freedom - believing, patriotic, fighting - spirited qualities - in EVERY ONE of our 50 States - who hesitate to change their present status - to full participation in, and decision to enter politics - filing for political offices as President, Congressmen, States Legislators, Governors and municipal Mayors - because of the satanic degradation and corruptness of the new political, monarchial usurpation of power and control-in Washington - by a merging of our Constitution, Executive, Legislative and Judicial Departments - which were originated as SEPARATE functions - with plainly explained responsibilities - and obligations to PREVENT either of the other two departments - from doing ANYTHING beyond their specific authority - or BREACHING their Constitutional duties.

These men of Founding Father calibre - better make up their minds to STEP FORWARD - offer their services in the political arena - and pledge their fortunes and balance of their butterfly term of existence - to save America - and insure freedoms for their descendants.

ALL of our people - in each respective State - who are terribly worried today about EVERYTHING that is materializing in America - but DON'T know that our U.S. Constitution has been destroyed in the past 50 years-and DON'T KNOW that a monarchial control over their possessions, earnings, individual and States - rights freedoms - MORE RUTHLESS THAN THAT OF KING GEORGE III - that our forefathers fought the Revolutionary War to eliminate-has been FOISTED upon them by a coalition of atheist politicians - from Presidents down - a Russian - type of atheist, so-called Supreme Court and Federal Judges throughout our States-atheist labor - union barons - atheist, hierarchical, ruthless controllers of the National Council of Churches, and a Godless Constitution - forgetting majority of Conress, States' Legislators, Governors and municipal Mayors - BETTER WAKE UP - SELECT their non - political, Founding Father calibre of God - fearing, Constitutional - believing men - request them to enter the political arena - pledge their vote-support - and CLEAN OUT ALL POLITICAL AND OTHER AMERICAN - DESTROYING PLOTTERS - national, state and local.

God give us men who will decide to pledge their lives and fortunes to save the America that God gave us - AWAKEN our people to their responsibilities - and steel them in determination to endure all deprivations that will materialize-and have to be endured over the years - necessary to build back a bankrupt America - to the solvent, God - fearing, Constitutional status - that America enjoyed for 130 years - but GAVE AWAY in just the last 50 years.

If we don't - our people will end up in SLAVERY - as did ALL PEOPLES FROM THE DAYS OF Jesus Christ. And there is NO OTHER parcel of God's earth left - for us to migrate to - as did the Pilgrims.

Mr. Charley Blanton:

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I hope you will print this for me as it may prove to be a help to others as well as myself and I can not express just what I mean in a lost and found ad on Thursday Dec. the 21, 1966. I was at the A.P. Grocery and bought $2.00 worth of grocerys paid for them out of a $5.00 dollar bill, put my little brown pocket book in my purse and did not have it open until I got to Liberty Market, and opened my purse to pay for my purchases there. Those 2 places were the only place I was at. Well, my pocket book was gone and every penny I had so I had to write a check to pay there. I do not know how much money there was in it. There was one side for change and one side for bills, but I do know that there is at least 5 dollars and more I think. The pocket book was not worth very much, I know, but I valued it very highly as my late husband bought it and I used it a long time. Before he passed away 12 years ago the 12th of December 1967 and it was in the jacket of the last pants he had worn before going to the hospital where he died. So there was a sentimental reason for keeping it so I do wish who ever found it would return it to me for it is the spookiest thing that ever happened to me. How and where it got out of my purse so I advise anyone to have their name and address in their billfold, pocket book or whatever. I thought I did but discovered I just had my name and address in the zipper compartment of my purse and not in the pocket book so probably this advise will keep someone else from lo sing their badly needed money as I did right at Christmas or any other time for that matter. I will greatly appreciate it if you print this and hope it finds my pocket book.

Thanking you,

A letter to Congressman Jones

The Honorable Paul C. Jones
House of Representatives
Wa shington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Jones:

I just read an editorial in the Sikeston Standard Sikeston, Missouri suggesting that the people revolt against higher taxes. I thought you might like to know, I feel the same way. This is the general feeling of most Americans.

I suggest if the President wants more money, let him stop so much wastful spending, also, a more efficient job, would save billions. This is the way we feel.

On open housing, I still believe that all Americans should have the right to do as they choose with their own; it is theirs, they have worked for it, let them decide what they will do with it; it is as simple as that.

We must stop this terrible war; we have the capabilities. The American people do not have the disposition to fight a perpetual war.

The farmer is having a tough time, along with many others, making ends meet. You talk about equality; then give the farmer his share of the "National Income."

There are many ways that this Country could be helped, but it seems that too many in "HIGH" places are dead bent on helping the commies bury us.

I am very sincerely yours,
R. C. Martin

Dear Sir:

Abraham Lincoln voiced the warning - "If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher." Our external enemies pale to insignificance when compared to the United Nations (our internal enemy). This bankrupt institution was founded on a fallacious premise; that the Soviet Union would cooperate with the United States to assure a peaceful world. It is disquieting to hear our Officials refer to the U.N. as the 'cornerstone of American policy' and 'the last great hope for peace.'

The United Nations, under the indispensable U. Thant, is the worst cancer over diagnosed in the body of any country throughout all history. No investigation is necessary, the record is clear; it should be abolished completely, and at once. Yet, inversely, the effort is made to make 'national' and 'sovereignty' dirty words, Internationalism is the 'thing' and Nationalism is downgraded.

We must resist, even at the risk of being labeled super or ultra patriots. If a paralyzed Congress will not act the people through their sovereign states must repeal the acts of their Washington representatives. The States can individually and collectively repeal the United Nations World Police State.

Yours truly,

Pueblo's Capture Opens Door on Spying Activity

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capture of the Pueblo by the North Koreans— and the Pentagon's acknowledgment the ship was a Navy intelligence vessel— lifts the official lid on worldwide electronic spying by the major powers.

It marks a drastic change from the Pentagon's insistence that the Liberty, a spy ship shot up by the Israelis off Egypt last June, was a "technical research ship."

"Intelligence collection by naval vessels is a routine activity among major powers," a defense official said Tuesday, indicating a more relaxed attitude toward suggestions the United States engages in this kind of activity.

"It is common knowledge that for a number of years intelligence collecting ships have followed U.S. fleet activities in various parts of the world," he added. The official obviously was alluding to the Soviet Union's terrier-like electronic eavesdropping vessels which show up wherever U.S. fleets are manuevering and near important Polaris submarine and other bases.

Such ships, in the guise of fishing trawlers, are "in fact positioned in international waters off the shores of the United States and other nations right now," this official said.

The U.S. intelligence vessels — which listen in on the radio traffic of other countries, spot radar sites and gather information to permit jamming them— and the Soviet Union's deep sea intelligence ships are parts of an extensive electronic intelligence system which has grown up in the Cold War years.

There are spy-in-the-sky satellites, both Soviet and American, whirling about the earth with almost unbelievably accurate cameras and "ferret" listening devices for eavesdropping on radio communications.

There are unmanned drones with sensitive information-gathering equipment. There are destroyers carrying "black boxes" which slip close to hostile shores to intercept radio talk, record coded messages and pick up other information. One of the two U.S. destroyers involved in the historic Tonkin Gulf attack by North Vietnamese patrol boats in August 1964 reportedly had been on such a mission.

The United States and Soviet Union, say nothing about what they know of the other side's electronic snooping from space.

But the U.S. Navy complains out loud about the operations of the Soviet "trawlers," some of which get into the flow of fleet traffic and sometimes interfere with carrier and other operations.

Members of Congress also have expressed alarm about increasingly active Soviet naval snooping.

Soviet trawlers have been reported standing off Polaris submarine bases at Holy Loch, Scotland, at Rota, Spain, Guam, and Charleston, S.C.

The Red trawlers monitored U.S. nuclear weapons tests in the Pacific in 1962.

U.S. vessels have taken positions in the Pacific to observe the re-entry and splashdown of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles fired into the mid-Pacific.

A Soviet intelligence-gathering trawler, the Anemometer, collided with a U.S. intelligence ship, the Banner, in the Sea of Japan in June 1966.

The 935-ton Pueblo is one of three of her class, all converted light cargo vessels.

She has about eight whip antennae and two heavy masts hung with special electronic gear.

The Pueblo engages in hydrographic surveys as well as electronic intelligence, dropping devices into the water to measure its temperature at various levels, its salinity and its density. All these factors are important in antisubmarine warfare work because they affect the penetration of sonar beams.

All told, there are about a dozen clearly identifiable intelligence-type ships in the U.S. Navy, along with about 15 oceanographic survey ships which may well serve an intelligence function also.

Then there are the destroyers and other surface craft which can be equipped with electronic sensors as needed.

Cairo Urged To Acquire Land for Homes

CAIRO -- Commissioner Carl Meisenheimer proposed that the city of Cairo acquire about 18 acres of land owned by the Missouri Pacific Railroad on the west side of the city on Park Avenue from 21st to 28th St., for the purpose of making available a site for residential expansion.

"Cairo must have expansion room for homes," Meisenheimer said.

He proposed the city acquire the land from the MoPac and sell to developers and to individuals for homesites.

Seniority Vital to Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — It takes chickens a long time to roost in the Senate. But by then they're not chickens any more. They're oldtimers. Three oldtimers are leaving this year. But the men who succeed them are no kids.

The typical Senate newcomer plays it quiet a few years before trying to assert himself and even then it takes more years before he obtains real power by becoming chairman of one of the Senate's standing committees.

That's taken care of by the seniority system, religiously observed. Translated into simple English it means: Take your time and wait your turn.

It goes like this: A newcomer has to wait in line behind all the party's other senators who have been there longer. He starts out as the low man on the committee.

Then as the years pass and one by one those ahead of him disappear because of death, resignation (which seldom happens), retirement or failure to get re-elected, he moves up until finally the chairman disappears and he becomes chairman.

Harry S. Truman was a typical example of the newcomer, but not of how any senator usually winds up. In his first six Senate years back in the 1930s, Truman was practically invisible, he talked so little.

Re-elected in 1940 he got himself named chairman of a special committee— not one of those standing committees— and made name for himself investigating American defense. From there he went to the vice presidency and presidency.

Robert F. Kennedy is a non-typical senator. He had a lot to say right from the start. But he had something working for him: He came from an unusual family and was elected under unusual circumstances.

As an example of what seniority means: In the Senate there are 16 standing committees. All the chairmen are Democrats because Democrats are in a majority in the Senate.

Waiting in their seniority line for the day when the Democrats lose their majority are the Republicans.

Of the 16 Democratic chairmen one, Sen. Carl Hayden of Arizona, is 90. He's been in Congress 56 years. Six others are in their 70s. Six are in their 60s. Two are in their 50s. Only one, Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana, is under 50. He's 49.

If the Democrats lose Senate control the top-ranking Republicans on these committees will be the new chairmen. As a group they are even older than the Democratic chairmen.

Seven are over 70, eight are in their 60s, and only one, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, is under 60. He's 57.

In recent weeks three old-timers on these committees— all in their 75-- announced they were retiring from the Senate this year.

Separatists Seeking Broader Support

QUEBEC (AP) — The movement to separate Quebec from the rest of Canada, encouraged by Charles de Gaulle, is trying to broaden its base and win more support.

The odds against it are heavy. It is still a minority movement among the French-Canadians who dominate Quebec Province.

The Liberals, who ruled Quebec under Premier Jean Lesage until June 1966, reject separatism "in all its forms." In the now-governing Union Nationale party, Premier Daniel Johnson rejects it at least "for the moment." He foresees a breakthrough in English-speaking Canada's attitude that could bring about constitutional changes more favorable to the French-Canadian viewpoint.

Johnson believes that French-speaking Canadians, 80 per cent of them in this province, can remain within the federal structure provided constitutional changes make them "feel at home" all over Canada.

In the existing constitutional setup Quebec is the only province where both French and English enjoy official status in the legislature, courts and schools.

Bilingualism in some form was recommended to the nine other provinces by a commission whose recommendations will be studied by the provinces and federal government next month.

Most Quebec separatists reject bilingualism "from coast to coast" as utopian, but the commission views it as a key to equality between Canada's two main linguistic groups.

Separatists argue that only in Quebec can French-Canadians master their destiny for only here do they form a majority.

They contend that French-Canadians, 30 per cent of the Canadian population in the 1961 census, can never live with dignity in Canada because they will forever be a minority.

The best way to protect French culture in predominantly English-language North America, they claim, is to build Quebec into an independent state with French as its sole official language. More than 80 per cent of Quebec's population speaks French.

The separatists label French-Canadians outside Quebec as "white Negroes" because they lack language rights. They write off most of their brethren in other provinces as lost by assimiliation to the English-language group.

Emotionally, separatism's finest moment came last July when Gen. de Gaulle mounted the balcony of Montreal's City Hall to shout the separatist rally cry, "Vive le Quebec libre"—Long live free Quebec.

But politically the separatists drew most encouragement last year when an influential politician, Rene Levesque, resigned from Quebec's Liberal party.

He advocates an independent Quebec linked to the rest of Canada by a form of economic "common market."

Levesque is trying to allay fears over separation by stressing these economic links, but it's doubtful how English Canada would cooperate with a separate Quebec.

Almost all observers say Levesque will be able to increase support for separatism, but few agree with his personal forecast that Quebec independence is only four years from realization.

In fact many separatist says privately that they anticipate continued tough going, electorally, arising from lack of widespread support in the politically powerful rural areas.

Killer Impulses Studied

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Medics are looking for ways to block brain impulses, triggered at times by fear or panic, which can switch off a healthy human heart and cause sudden death.

Studies on how to short-circuit the killer impulses are under way at the University of Oklahoma Medical Center.

The fatal brain impulses can be brought about by several factors, said Dr. Stewart Wolf, director of the neurosciences section of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation.

"Drowning victims," he said, often are found to have no water in their lungs. "The patient just died of a turned-off heart as a result of fear or panic . . . the same could be true of those who died from snakebites." He added that only 15 to 20 per cent of snakebite fatalities have had enough venom to kill them.

"Heart attacks occur most frequently," Wolf said, "in those emotionally upset, those depressed, or those at the end of their rope, shunned by a tight society, with no place to turn.

"Sudden death may be due to a combination, which may include heart damage, chronic emotional states such as dejection and discouragement or other factors, such as overwhelming or sudden fear."

Wolf said "we know it is possible to activate in animals the brain mechanism which turns off the heart. You can do it in a number of ways. We are experimenting in various methods of blocking the mechanism."

"The uncertainty of when it's going to happen," he added, is the biggest hurdle facing the researchers.

"It's too early to get into the methods," Wolf said. "There isn't any pill . . . there are maneuvers we can use in animal work which we can't use in humans at this time. We're working with animals to try to develop a practical way to do it with humans."

"We must reverse the long held general opinion that the heart controls the brain," Delgado said.

Rancher's Best Friend

By PAT VOGT
Beatrice Daily Sun Writer

ELLIS, Neb. (AP)—"I wouldn't be in the sheep business if I didn't have a dog," confides sheep rancher Alan Thober.

What a dog he has!

Pepper, a 7-year-old German Shepherd, is a supercanine who capably herds sheep, fearlessly rides atop the cab of a pickup truck around the ranch and indulges in pheasant-hunting in his spare time. He's gentle with youngsters, too.

Alaskan's Flood Loan and Land Deal Puzzles Gross

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prominent Alaska Democrat who received the largest government disaster loan after the Fairbanks flood purchased $203,100 worth of land in Arizona shortly thereafter, Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, said Wednesday.

Gross told the House that L. Donald Pruhs, a Democratic state central committeeman, bought 800 acres of land in Yuma County, Ariz., after receiving an $894,000 disaster loan from the Small Business Administration.

"Where did the money come from for the Arizona deal?" Gross asked.

Pruhs' loan was approved the first week in October, records show. On Oct. 19, Gross said, Pruhs paid out $3,000 in cash as a down payment on a 160-acre parcel of land in Yuma County.

Gross said Pruhs paid $10,500 down on a 640-acre parcel of land Nov. 28. Another $24,500 is owed on the second parcel by Feb. 1, the Iowa Republican said.

Vernon Wright, recorder of deeds in Yuma County, confirmed Gross, information in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Gross said Pruhs and his wife bought the first parcel from Milo Kline and Burt H. Carlson, whose addresses were not given. The second parcel was purchased with a Gerald M. Evans from Tamco, Inc., which Gross said is an Idaho corporation.

The AP disclosed last week that Pruhs—employer of Alex Miller, Alaska's Democratic national committeeman—received an $894,000 loan from the SBA after the August flood damaged his Golden Nugget Motel.

At the same time, the SBA cut by half the $1.2-million loan application of Republican Gov. Walter J. Hickel, owner of the Travelers Inn, a motel across the street.

Gross has demanded a congressional investigation of the transactions. Another member of Congress has ordered a special audit by the General Accounting Office, which, as an arm of Congress, watches over government spending.

The SBA has said—in confirmation of details provided by gross—that $140,000 of the $894,000 loan to Pruhs was to repair his motel, $704,000 was to retire existing debts, and $49,100 was for working capital

Gross told the AP last week Pruhs paid off a $420,000 bank loan, which called for 8 per cent interest over 10 years, with his low-rate disaster loan. Pruhs has 30 years to repay the government the $894,000 at 3 per cent interest.

Gross said Pruhs's bank loan called for high payments over the tourist season, lower payments during the winter. The SBA loan called for year-around payments comparable to Pruhs's off-season obligation to his bank, Gross said.

The SBA, in a "fact sheet" issued Tuesday evening, broke down for the first time its $623,400 disaster loan to Gov. Hickle's Travelers Inn. Previously the SBA had insisted the law prohibits it from disclosing such breakdowns.

The SBA said Hickel received $467,900 for physical damage and $155,500 for debt refinancing.

"The approved physical damage loss of the Travelers Inn," the SBA aid, "was more than three times greater than the physical damage loss approved for the Golden Nugget Motel and more than 80 per cent of the physical loss requested.

"The difference in the amounts of approved loans for these two borrowers was due to the difference in their resource availability to carry current debt and to the ineligibility of the Travelers Inn, a big business, to receive federal funds for economic injury."

Neither the House nor Senate small business committees has indicated it plans to look into the SBA's disaster loan program or the Fairbanks transactions.

Passenger Role in Rail Future Small

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a lot of talk about 160 mile an hour trains, few Americans would believe that the description, "America's Modern transportation Miracle," refers to railroads.

Instead, if presented a booklet of that title, they would expect to see pictures of jets whisking relaxed couples in silken smoothness to a distant island resort, to Europe or to the Orient.

The railroads are serious, however, and that quotation is used as the subtitle of a booklet produced by the Association of American Railroads called "Railroads Unlimited!" and carrying the inscription:

"A continentwide story of sweeping change and challenge — a modern industrial miracle . . ."

Why, then, has the public been so unaware of this great change by which American railroads are "overcoming awesome obstacles . . . moving along a track that leads to unlimited public service?"

Primarily because the revolution referred to is occuring, if at all, primarily in freight rather than passenger traffic. It refers to piggyback cars, unit trains, automatic freight car identification, mergers.

"We are faced with the hard facts of life," said Thomas Goodfellow, president of the association. "People have deserted us. The public says it doesn't want to ride trains," he said in an interview.

Goodfellow, who has described himself as a country boy but who is past president of the Long Island Rail Road, is certain that it wasn't the other way round—that rails weren't ingenious or progressive or broadminded enough to keep their passengers.

And, lest thousands of harried commuters take exception to so sweeping a statement, Goodfellow adds some qualifications.

Separatists Seeking Broader Support

QUEBEC (AP) — The movement to separate Quebec from the rest of Canada, encouraged by Charles de Gaulle, is trying to broaden its base and win more support.

The odds against it are heavy. It is still a minority movement among the French-Canadians who dominate Quebec Province.

The Liberals, who ruled Quebec under Premier Jean Lesage until June 1966, reject separatism "in all its forms." In the now-governing Union Nationale party, Premier Daniel Johnson rejects it at least "for the moment." He foresees a breakthrough in English-speaking Canada's attitude that could bring about constitutional changes more favorable to the French-Canadian viewpoint.

Johnson believes that French-speaking Canadians, 80 per cent of them in this province, can remain within the federal structure provided constitutional changes make them "feel at home" all over Canada.

In the existing constitutional setup Quebec is the only province where both French and English enjoy official status in the legislature, courts and schools.

Bilingualism in some form was recommended to the nine other provinces by a commission whose recommendations will be studied by the provinces and federal government next month.

Most Quebec separatists reject bilingualism "from coast to coast" as utopian, but the commission views it as a key to equality between Canada's two main linguistic groups.

Separatists argue that only in Quebec can French-Canadians master their destiny for only here do they form a majority.

They contend that French-Canadians, 30 per cent of the Canadian population in the 1961 census, can never live with dignity in Canada because they will forever be a minority.

The best way to protect French culture in predominantly English-language North America, they claim, is to build Quebec into an independent state with French as its sole official language. More than 80 per cent of Quebec's population speaks French.

The separatists label French-Canadians outside Quebec as "white Negroes" because they lack language rights. They write off most of their brethren in other provinces as lost by assimiliation to the English-language group.

Emotionally, separatism's finest moment came last July when Gen. de Gaulle mounted the balcony of Montreal's City Hall to shout the separatist rally cry, "Vive le Quebec libre"—Long live free Quebec.

But politically the separatists drew most encouragement last year when an influential politician, Rene Levesque, resigned from Quebec's Liberal party.

He advocates an independent Quebec linked to the rest of Canada by a form of economic "common market."

Levesque is trying to allay fears over separation by stressing these economic links, but it's doubtful how English Canada would cooperate with a separate Quebec.

Almost all observers say Levesque will be able to increase support for separatism, but few agree with his personal forecast that Quebec independence is only four years from realization.

In fact many separatist says privately that they anticipate continued tough going, electorally, arising from lack of widespread support in the politically powerful rural areas.

Killer Impulses Studied

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Medics are looking for ways to block brain impulses, triggered at times by fear or panic, which can switch off a healthy human heart and cause sudden death.

Studies on how to short-circuit the killer impulses are under way at the University of Oklahoma Medical Center.

The fatal brain impulses can be brought about by several factors, said Dr. Stewart Wolf, director of the neurosciences section of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation.

"Drowning victims," he said, often are found to have no water in their lungs. "The patient just died of a turned-off heart as a result of fear or panic . . . the same could be true of those who died from snakebites." He added that only 15 to 20 per cent of snakebite fatalities have had enough venom to kill them.

"Heart attacks occur most frequently," Wolf said, "in those emotionally upset, those depressed, or those at the end of their rope, shunned by a tight society, with no place to turn.

"Sudden death may be due to a combination, which may include heart damage, chronic emotional states such as dejection and discouragement or other factors, such as overwhelming or sudden fear."

Wolf said "we know it is possible to activate in animals the brain mechanism which turns off the heart. You can do it in a number of ways. We are experimenting in various methods of blocking the mechanism."

"The uncertainty of when it's going to happen," he added, is the biggest hurdle facing the researchers.

"It's too early to get into the methods," Wolf said. "There isn't any pill . . . there are maneuvers we can use in animal work which we can't use in humans at this time. We're working with animals to try to develop a practical way to do it with humans."

"We must reverse the long held general opinion that the heart controls the brain," Delgado said.

Rancher's Best Friend

PEPPER, Alan Thober's 7-year-old German Shepherd, sits patiently while Thober's small daughter plays with his collar (left), but when he's at work as a sheep dog he's all business. At right, Pepper is shown on his perch for riding about the Ellis, Neb., ranch—on the top of the pickup truck cab.

ELLIS, Neb. (AP)—"I wouldn't be in the sheep business if I didn't have a dog," confides sheep rancher Alan Thober.

What a dog he has!

Pepper, a 7-year-old German Shepherd, is a supercanine who capably herds sheep, fearlessly rides atop the cab of a pickup truck around the ranch and indulges in pheasant-hunting in his spare time. He's gentle with youngsters, too.

"He can move 700 sheep down a road beside a fenceless field without any help," says Thober. "I drive the pickup ahead to keep the sheep from running. Pepper does the rest.

Alaskan's Flood Loan and Land Deal Puzzles Gross

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prominent Alaska Democrat who received the largest government disaster loan after the Fairbanks flood purchased $203,100 worth of land in Arizona shortly thereafter, Rep. H. R. Gross, R-Iowa, said Wednesday.

Gross told the House that L. Donald Pruhs, a Democratic state central committeeman, bought 800 acres of land in Yuma County, Ariz., after receiving an $894,000 disaster loan from the Small Business Administration.

"Where did the money come from for the Arizona deal?" Gross asked.

Pruhs' loan was approved the first week in October, records show. On Oct. 19, Gross said, Pruhs paid out $3,000 in cash as a down payment on a 160-acre parcel of land in Yuma County.

Gross said Pruhs paid $10,500 down on a 640-acre parcel of land Nov. 28. Another $24,500 is owed on the second parcel by Feb. 1, the Iowa Republican said.

Vernon Wright, recorder of deeds in Yuma County, confirmed Gross, information in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Gross said Pruhs and his wife bought the first parcel from Milo Kline and Burt H. Carlson, whose addresses were not given. The second parcel was purchased with a Gerald M. Evans from Tamco, Inc., which Gross said is an Idaho corporation.

The AP disclosed last week that Pruhs—employer of Alex Miller, Alaska's Democratic national committeeman—received an $894,000 loan from the SBA after the August flood damaged his Golden Nugget Motel.

At the same time, the SBA cut by half the $1.2-million loan application of Republican Gov. Walter J. Hickel, owner of the Travelers Inn, a motel across the street.

Gross has demanded a congressional investigation of the transactions. Another member of Congress has ordered a special audit by the General Accounting Office, which, as an arm of Congress, watches over government spending.

The SBA has said—in confirmation of details provided by gross—that $140,000 of the $894,000 loan to Pruhs was to repair his motel, $704,000 was to retire existing debts, and $49,100 was for working capital

Gross told the AP last week Pruhs paid off a $420,000 bank loan, which called for 8 per cent interest over 10 years, with his low-rate disaster loan. Pruhs has 30 years to repay the government the $894,000 at 3 per cent interest.

Gross said Pruhs's bank loan called for high payments over the tourist season, lower payments during the winter. The SBA loan called for year-around payments comparable to Pruhs's off-season obligation to his bank, Gross said.

The SBA, in a "fact sheet" issued Tuesday evening, broke down for the first time its $623,400 disaster loan to Gov. Hickle's Travelers Inn. Previously the SBA had insisted the law prohibits it from disclosing such breakdowns.

The SBA said Hickel received $467,900 for physical damage and $155,500 for debt refinancing.

"The approved physical damage loss of the Travelers Inn," the SBA aid, "was more than three times greater than the physical damage loss approved for the Golden Nugget Motel and more than 80 per cent of the physical loss requested.

"The difference in the amounts of approved loans for these two borrowers was due to the difference in their resource availability to carry current debt and to the ineligibility of the Travelers Inn, a big business, to receive federal funds for economic injury."

Neither the House nor Senate small business committees has indicated it plans to look into the SBA's disaster loan program or the Fairbanks transactions.

Primarily because the revolution referred to is occuring, if at all, primarily in freight rather than passenger traffic. It refers to piggyback cars, unit trains, automatic freight car identification, mergers.

"We are faced with the hard facts of life," said Thomas Goodfellow, president of the association. "People have deserted us. The public says it doesn't want to ride trains," he said in an interview.

Goodfellow, who has described himself as a country boy but who is past president of the Long Island Rail Road, is certain that it wasn't the other way round—that rails weren't ingenious or progressive or broadminded enough to keep their passengers.

And, lest thousands of harried commuters take exception to so sweeping a statement, Goodfellow adds some qualifications.

Peace Corps Still Ahead In Friends

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Peace Corps' official policy says volunteers are not to get involved in the politics of a host nation. But there's nothing in the rule book that says local politics can't involve the Peace Corps.

During the seven years of its existence, the Peace Corps has been caught up in the political and armed crossfires of countries in which it serves.

The volunteer agency's batting average, however, has been quite high in winning more friends than it loses.

Since its inception in 1961, the Corps has left a nation— either voluntarily or on being asked— on the average of one country a year.

On the other hand, it has sent volunteers to a new nation on the average of nine new countries a year.

Thus, the Peace Corps had slightly more than 12,000 volunteers serving in 55 countries by the end of 1967. Today, volunteers were scheduled to arrive in Fiji. Dahomey is scheduled to receive volunteers in February.

Volunteers have left seven countries during the past seven years but one— Ceylon— asked for more volunteers last year after asking them to leave in 1964.

The other countries in which volunteers no longer serve are Pakistan, Cyprus, Guinea, Indonesia, Mauritania and Gabon.

The Peace Corps is gradually fading out of Nigeria, once one of the agency's largest programs, but there has been no official notice the program there is being eliminated.

Jack Vaughn, director, and other officials at headquarters here have a standard reply when asked about volunteers being pulled out of a country.

Typical was the reply in December when the announcement was made that 57 volunteers were being withdrawn from Gabon at the request of that French-speaking West African nation: "We go to a country at the invitation of the host government, and whenever a government wishes us to leave, we do so willingly."

There was no mention of the recent shakeup in the Gabonese government after the death of the prime minister and the possibility of influence from the French government.

The Corps does not officially comment critically on its ousters because there is always the possibility of another change in government.

In 1962, the Peace Corps sent 39 volunteers to Ceylon for a two year tour of duty but the program was not continued after it ended in 1964 "by mutual agreement of the United States and Ceylon governments," according to official releases.

Unofficially, an anti-United States government was put in office in 1964 and asked that the volunteers be withdrawn.

Last year, however, there was another change in the government— to a pro-United States body— and the Peace Corps was invited back.

Computer Undoing of Multiple Tax Filer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Leroy J. Deskin, termed "the largest multiple filer in the history of the Internal Revenue Service" by an assistant U.S. attorney, Wednesday received a maximum prison sentence of three years.

Deskin, 61, the IRS said, would have obtained $800,000 in refunds if he had succeeded with his 240 fictitious filings. An IRS computer was his undoing.

Kinder Konzerts Popular Addition for Symphony

WEBSTER GROVES, Mo. (AP) — The audience of almost 1,000 knew it was true when the reve red commentator who is appearing in a series of St. Louis Symphony Orchestra concerts said:

"If you're gonna write an overture, don't fool around with a bad one."

The musical commentator is Clif St. James, better known to area television audiences as Corky, The Clown, (KSD-TV). The "Kinder Konzerts," as they are called, are becoming a staple item on the schedule of the St. Louis orchestra.

The recent observation about overtures followed a rendition of Mozart's overture to "The Marriage of Figaro."

"That's a nice overture," Corky said. And the kids agreed.

"Do you know who wrote that overture? Well it was Mozart," Corky exclaimed. "You try it. Say Mozart."

And the kids, with gusto, said, "Mozart."

This is the kind of basic instruction that is regularly packing an auditorium in the St. Louis suburb of Webster Groves, Mo.

The Kinder Konzerts are the project of the junior division of the orchestra's women's association. The ladies are no older than 35 years and most have children in the 4 to 8 years age group now served by the events.

The Konzerts were started a year ago to provide an introduction to the orchestra for the younger children. The name was chosen because of the novelty and the fact that St. Louis has a strong German background. Kinder, as in kindergarten, is German for children.

To make the introduction as painless and pleasant as possible, the leaders of the group asked St. James to don his clown suit and talk for the orchestra.

"The 45-minute programs are designed to keep the kids' attention," said St. James. "The selections are therefore necessarily short — about three to four minutes each.

"And the repertoire is mixed," St. James continued. "We try to give them something familiar. We bring the music to their level. No stuffed shirt business,"

At a typical Konzert the audience of about 900 kids was dotted with smartly dressed mothers and a couple of fathers.

Following the overture, the orchestra played "The Little Train to Caipiras" by Villa-Lobos. The rhythm played by the 90-piece orchestra began to take its toll on the kids and the mothers began to look apologetic. Midway through the number, which is loaded with raspy, tooty, choo choo train sound effects, the kids had joined the orchestra and the mothers had given up.

Then the train reached the station and Corky, The Clown, jumped up to lead the applause.

Associate Conductor Edward Murphy acknowledged the ovation and asked the musicians to stand. All were quite solemn although the more mature witnesses could see that the members of the orchestra were having more fun than the kids.

"Simply Marvelous reactions," said Conductor Murphy. "I love to hear the little conversations from behind my back in the front row. The members of the orchestra simply would not miss these concerts," he added.

Near the end of the session at the Loretto-Hilton Center on the Webster College campus, Corky announced a Johann Strauss Waltz, "Voices of Spring."

"Pretty music is a waltz, right?" The kids responded quickly to Corky's question.

Then the orchestra executed the tumbling introduction, met the bass instruments at the bottom of the scale and the kids in the room began swaying like wheat in the wind. They could not control themselves.

Of course, pretty music is a waltz.

Love Potion Sets Trap for Wireworms

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the love bug bites the sugar beet wireworm from now on it could be the death of him.

For when he thinks love is in the air it could be just a trap set by scientists who want to keep him out of the potato and lettuce patches of the Pacific Northwest and western Canada, where the sugar beet wireworm causes considerable crop damage.

Scientists have reported the isolation and identification of the chemical used by the female sugar beet wireworm to lure males to love-making. They said it opened up possibilities for a new trap-bait for fighting this major agricultural pest.

Researchers Martin Jacobson and Charles Harding of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Beltsville, Md. Research station, and Charles E. Lilly of Canada's Department of agriculture at Lethbridge, Alberta, reported the finding in January's issue of the technical journal Science.

They said the sex-lure chemical had been identified as valeric acid— which is also readily available in the chemical industry.

Industrially, the acid is derived from such sources as petroleum distillates. It is employed in various kinds of organic syntheses.

In laboratory tests, the researchers said, "intense sexual excitement" was stimulated in male wireworms when dilute solutions of the extracted chemical were deployed in the laboratory.

In field tests, males were lured from distances of almost 40 feet when samples of the love chemical were exposed to the air.

Indicating efforts would now be made to put the finding to practical use, the scientists said the stability, volatility, and ready availability of valeric acid from industrial sources make it a potentially valuable material for surveying for infestations of the insect. It also could be used as a bait in traps for population control, they said.

WHY SHOULD YOU USE WANT ADS?

ANSWER:

You Can Buy Almost Anything With a Want Ad

Almost everything is sold through the Classified columns of the Daily Standard Whether you need household goods, Livestock, Farm Supplies, or some item that you don't think you would find, it is probably in the For Sale column, or can be found in the Wanted Columns.

You Can SELL Almost Anything With a Want Ad

Everything sells through the Want Ads. And sells at little cost, too. Don't throw it away, and don't keep it around if you don't need it, you can sell it for CASH with a Want Ad.

You Can Place A Want Ad Easily

Want Ads are easy to place. Write them out and mail them in, or dial the phone and call them in, or better yet, drop into the Daily Standard office and let our trained staff help you write it out. You will be amazed at the results.

Want Ads Are Cheap

As little as $1.26 will place most ads in front of almost every reader in Scott county, one of whom is sure to have what you want, or wants what you want to sell. So whatever it is, you can use a classified ad economically, early, and quickly.

QUESTION:

WHY SHOULD YOU USE WANT ADS?

ANSWER:

You Can Buy Almost Anything With a Want Ad

Almost everything is sold through the Classified columns of the Daily Standard Whether you need household goods, Livestock, Farm Supplies, or some item that you don't think you would find, it is probably in the For Sale column, or can be found in the Wanted Columns.

You Can SELL Almost Anything With a Want Ad

Everything sells through the Want Ads. And sells at little cost, too. Don't throw it away, and don't keep it around if you don't need it, you can sell it for CASH with a Want Ad.

You Can Place A Want Ad Easily

Want Ads are easy to place. Write them out and mail them in, or dial the phone and call them in, or better yet, drop into the Daily Standard office and let our trained staff help you write it out. You will be amazed at the results.

Want Ads Are Cheap

As little as $1.26 will place most ads in front of almost every reader in Scott county, one of whom is sure to have what you want, or wants what you want to sell. So whatever it is, you can use a classified ad economically, early, and quickly.

If You Were The Judge

Insane People May Be Able to Vote

Nutty Nelson, confined to a mental institution, was just crazy about it. He was also crazy about politics. Consequently, when election time rolled around, he wrote for, received and mailed back an absentee ballot. When it was later discovered that Nelson had been delcared insane years earlier, proceedings were immediately instituted in court to have Nelson's ballot scratched.

"Only sane people can vote in an election," the judge was told. "Since Nelson was null and void at the time he voted, so was his ballot."

"That's not so," retorted Nelson with great indignation. "The statute that specifically disqualifies insane people from voting refers only to those insane people who have had guardians appointed for them. Since no guardian was ever appointed for me, I'm entitled to vote like all the other nutty people in this world."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Nelson to vote in the election?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that literally construed, the voting statute only excluded those insane people from voting who have had guardians appointed to them. Therefore, despite Nelson's insanity, he was not precluded from voting since no guardian was ever appointed for him.

(Based upon a 1963 Missouri Supreme Court Decision)

Firms Damaged By Explosives In Mail Chutes

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Plastic explosive tucked through the mail slots of three businesses exploded early today within 22 minutes, police said, shattering the offices of two companies that ship packages to Cuba and damaging a garage.

Police Sgt. Russ Leasburg was injured slightly while investigating the first blast when a second explosive detonated at the same spot, Lt. James H. Knight said. Knight said the timing of the second blast apparently was accidental.

At the hardest-hit office, All Travel Agency on Coral Way, owner J. Astigarrara said he ships food and clothing packages to Cuba on a commercial basis. He blamed the bombing on a group that calls itself "Cuban Power."

Last Saturday a group calling itself "Cuban Power" said it exploded a bomb in a B25 airplane loaded with similar packages to Cuba and parked at Miami International Airport.

The group later issued a warning, signed "Ernesto" and captioned "War Communique No. 1," threatening further bombings— including planes in flight— unless such shipments to Cuba were halted."

The packages— mainly food and clothing— are shipped to relatives by exiles here.

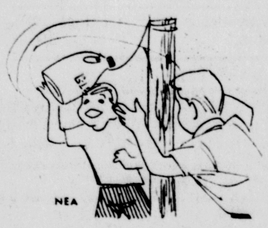
Variety of Foodstuff Possible for Lunches

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Lynne requested some ideas for lunches, other than sandwiches, that could be easily carried to school or work. My daughter also prefers something different and less starchy than sandwiches. She likes chicken, tuna or ham salad made with chopped celery, as well as fruit salad for a change. I make extra meat loaf once a week and this offers variety, too. A few wheat or other crackers are added to go with any of these things. We pack such lunches in those neat containers, with tops, that soft margarine comes in. One filled with cottage cheese also makes a nice accompaniment to the fruit salad. We buy the small plastic spoons and forks to pack with such lunches so if one is lost there is no worry. I do hope I have helped as I so enjoy the column.—MRS. L. E. M. Jr.

DEAR MRS. L. E. M.—It is music to my ears to hear you and others say you enjoy the column and I know you have helped Lynne and others, too.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—We could not afford the tetherball set our two sons wanted very badly, so we dreamed up one we could make ourselves. We took a well-washed plastic bleach bottle, hooked a rope (lightweight chain could be used) and the handle and tied to a limb near the trunk of the tree. It is not just what they wanted but they and the other children in the neighborhood have a good time with it.—MRS. M. F. N.



DEAR POLLY—Even though Easter only comes once a year, I color my hard-boiled eggs all the time. I do this because my little one opens the refrigerator door and switches the hard-boiled and raw eggs which I try to keep in two different egg racks on the inside of the door. I have tried marking an H with pencil on the hard-cooked ones but she has turned them in such a way I do not see it, and I have grabbed a raw egg by mistake when I was in a hurry. I have even taken one to work for lunch. You should have seen the mess that raw egg made when I cracked it on the edge of my desk. Now I know the colored ones are cooked.

I also keep a cup filled with milk in the refrigerator so when she wants a drink of milk she can go and get it for herself. This saves a lot of time when I am busy.—PAT

Ann Landers

Fat Woman Gets Load Off Her Chest But Sheds No Pounds

Dear Ann Landers: What gives you the right to insult people and call it "advice?" Through the years you have printed several cruel and hurtful letters about fat people but the last one really got to me. The notion that a woman would eat herself out of shape in order to discourage her husband's love making was plain crazy. I nearly gagged when you agreed with the nosey sister-in-law that her hunch might be right.

It's time we fat people stood up for outselves. I say to you, Ann Landers, and to others who can't resist the vicious barbs, leave us alone. Our size is a highly personal matter. If we'd rather eat and enjoy life than walk around half starven, mean, and skinny, whose business is it?

I've seen pictures of you, but only the head. I wonder what the rest of you looks like. It wouldn't surprise me if you are a fat lady who is trying to fool people by printing anti-fat letters.

I know you'll never publish this one but I feel better for having written it. -- WELL UPHOLSTERED AND NOT ASHAMED

Dear Well Upholstered: Now that you feel better, go make a batch of fudge and reward yourself for telling me off.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has three brothers, a sister, an ex-wife and six children by that marriage. When he and his wife were divorced he gave her everything she asked for and has been Johnny-on-the-Spot with the support checks for several years.

Not one member of his family has shown the slightest interest in this man even though he is diabetic and in poor health. He has never received so much as a card on this birthday, Father's Day or Christmas. When he used to call his children on the telephone they hung up in his ear. He doesn't call them any more.

When my husband passes away I will have to make the burial arrangements. Should I notify his relatives? He has asked that I not do so. What is my duty? -- A HOUSE DIVIDED

Dear H. D.: Your husband's wishes should take precedence over custom, since it is obvious that he is not considered a member of the family. When he passes away, notify the newspaper. His relatives will learn of his death and will come to the funeral if they wish to.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter is 18 and in her first year of college. Judith is an attractive girl, a reasonably bright student, has a nice figure and always dated fine young men when she was in high school.

When Judith came home for the holidays she announced that she is in love with a 28-year-old college student who is divorced and has four children. He told her some dreadful things about her ex-wife which makes me wonder why he allowed her to keep the children. Also, how can he pay support money and go to college when he has only a part-time job? So many things do not add up that I am frightened out of my wits that he is a four-flusher.

I always thought our daughter was a level-headed, feet-on-the-ground type but I was mistaken. How should I handle this situation? -- S.L.C.

Dear S. L. C.: You have undoubtedly let Judith know how you fell about the young man. Now cool it and keep quiet. If all the mothers who propelled their daughters into poor marriages by nagging were laid end to end they'd reach from here to maternity.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Lions Club Takes Part In Sight Campaign

President Wallace E. Waters of the Lions club announces that the club is taking part in the Missouri Lions eye bank program at the University of Missouri school of medicine in Columbia.

The Lions Clubs of Missouri have pledged $250,000 for the expansion of facilities and equipment for a sight clinic at the university medical center in Columbia, announces Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, executive director for health affairs for Missouri University.

The funds will be used for constructing and equipping a modern eye clinic, laboratory, research area and facilities for the Lions eye tissue bank.

"Missouri Lions have supported an eye tissue bank at the University for seven years and will continue this activity," said Dr. William M. Heart, professor of surgery, and head of the opthalmology section. "With added facilities, the program can be broadened to include development of a research program on the blinding eye diseases."

He said that the federal government is expected to match the Lions clubs' funds for expanding the present facilities.

The sight clinic will be in a seven-story proposed out-patient clinic, which is included in new construction plans of the University's Columbia campus. More than 70,000 persons were treated last year in the clinics designed for half that number of patients.

The Lions eye bank of the university came into being in 1960, when an agreement was signed between the university and the Multiple District 27, Inc., of Lions International. Since 63 collecting stations have been opened in Missouri.

A total of 545 eyes have been donated from deceased persons to restore sight to the living. There are now more than 6,000 pledge cards on file, received from persons who wish to donate their eyes, after death, to this cause, Dr. Leo Landhuis director of the bank, reports.

The research program has placed emphasis on the storage and preservation of eye tissue and the development of new techniques for the use of the tissue in surgery.

Haywood Snipes of Poplar Bluff is the chairman of the Missouri Lions sight conservation committee. Other members are Don Nowell of Columbia; Tom Sneed of Mt. Sterling; Robert Miller, Butler; Dr. Leon Miller, Marryville; C. V. Bucholz, Kansas City; Dr. C. Andy Wurst, Springfield; and Abe Ashner of St. Louis.

If You Were The Judge

Insane People May Be Able to Vote

Nutty Nelson, confined to a mental institution, was just crazy about it. He was also crazy about politics. Consequently, when election time rolled around, he wrote for, received and mailed back an absentee ballot. When it was later discovered that Nelson had been delcared insane years earlier, proceedings were immediately instituted in court to have Nelson's ballot scratched.

"Only sane people can vote in an election," the judge was told. "Since Nelson was null and void at the time he voted, so was his ballot."

"That's not so," retorted Nelson with great indignation. "The statute that specifically disqualifies insane people from voting refers only to those insane people who have had guardians appointed for them. Since no guardian was ever appointed for me, I'm entitled to vote like all the other nutty people in this world."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit Nelson to vote in the election?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that literally construed, the voting statute only excluded those insane people from voting who have had guardians appointed to them. Therefore, despite Nelson's insanity, he was not precluded from voting since no guardian was ever appointed for him.

Ann Landers

Fat Woman Gets Load Off Her Chest But Sheds No Pounds

Dear Ann Landers: What gives you the right to insult people and call it "advice?" Through the years you have printed several cruel and hurtful letters about fat people but the last one really got to me. The notion that a woman would eat herself out of shape in order to discourage her husband's love making was plain crazy. I nearly gagged when you agreed with the nosey sister-in-law that her hunch might be right.

It's time we fat people stood up for outselves. I say to you, Ann Landers, and to others who can't resist the vicious barbs, leave us alone. Our size is a highly personal matter. If we'd rather eat and enjoy life than walk around half starven, mean, and skinny, whose business is it?

I've seen pictures of you, but only the head. I wonder what the rest of you looks like. It wouldn't surprise me if you are a fat lady who is trying to fool people by printing anti-fat letters.

I know you'll never publish this one but I feel better for having written it. -- WELL UPHOLSTERED AND NOT ASHAMED

Dear Well Upholstered: Now that you feel better, go make a batch of fudge and reward yourself for telling me off.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has three brothers, a sister, an ex-wife and six children by that marriage. When he and his wife were divorced he gave her everything she asked for and has been Johnny-on-the-Spot with the support checks for several years.

Not one member of his family has shown the slightest interest in this man even though he is diabetic and in poor health. He has never received so much as a card on this birthday, Father's Day or Christmas. When he used to call his children on the telephone they hung up in his ear. He doesn't call them any more.

When my husband passes away I will have to make the burial arrangements. Should I notify his relatives? He has asked that I not do so. What is my duty? -- A HOUSE DIVIDED

Dear H. D.: Your husband's wishes should take precedence over custom, since it is obvious that he is not considered a member of the family. When he passes away, notify the newspaper. His relatives will learn of his death and will come to the funeral if they wish to.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter is 18 and in her first year of college. Judith is an attractive girl, a reasonably bright student, has a nice figure and always dated fine young men when she was in high school.

When Judith came home for the holidays she announced that she is in love with a 28-year-old college student who is divorced and has four children. He told her some dreadful things about her ex-wife which makes me wonder why he allowed her to keep the children. Also, how can he pay support money and go to college when he has only a part-time job? So many things do not add up that I am frightened out of my wits that he is a four-flusher.

I always thought our daughter was a level-headed, feet-on-the-ground type but I was mistaken. How should I handle this situation? -- S.L.C.

Dear S. L. C.: You have undoubtedly let Judith know how you fell about the young man. Now cool it and keep quiet. If all the mothers who propelled their daughters into poor marriages by nagging were laid end to end they'd reach from here to maternity.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Lions Club Takes Part In Sight Campaign

President Wallace E. Waters of the Lions club announces that the club is taking part in the Missouri Lions eye bank program at the University of Missouri school of medicine in Columbia.

The Lions Clubs of Missouri have pledged $250,000 for the expansion of facilities and equipment for a sight clinic at the university medical center in Columbia, announces Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, executive director for health affairs for Missouri University.

The funds will be used for constructing and equipping a modern eye clinic, laboratory, research area and facilities for the Lions eye tissue bank.

"Missouri Lions have supported an eye tissue bank at the University for seven years and will continue this activity," said Dr. William M. Heart, professor of surgery, and head of the opthalmology section. "With added facilities, the program can be broadened to include development of a research program on the blinding eye diseases."

He said that the federal government is expected to match the Lions clubs' funds for expanding the present facilities.

The sight clinic will be in a seven-story proposed out-patient clinic, which is included in new construction plans of the University's Columbia campus. More than 70,000 persons were treated last year in the clinics designed for half that number of patients.

The Lions eye bank of the university came into being in 1960, when an agreement was signed between the university and the Multiple District 27, Inc., of Lions International. Since 63 collecting stations have been opened in Missouri.

A total of 545 eyes have been donated from deceased persons to restore sight to the living. There are now more than 6,000 pledge cards on file, received from persons who wish to donate their eyes, after death, to this cause, Dr. Leo Landhuis director of the bank, reports.

The research program has placed emphasis on the storage and preservation of eye tissue and the development of new techniques for the use of the tissue in surgery.

Haywood Snipes of Poplar Bluff is the chairman of the Missouri Lions sight conservation committee. Other members are Don Nowell of Columbia; Tom Sneed of Mt. Sterling; Robert Miller, Butler; Dr. Leon Miller, Marryville; C. V. Bucholz, Kansas City; Dr. C. Andy Wurst, Springfield; and Abe Ashner of St. Louis.

U.S. Spurned Chance For 3 U.N. Votes

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A primer on voting strength at the United Nations might go something like this:

What power has three votes in the United Nations?

The Soviet Union.

What nation spurned a chance to have the same?

The United States.

Does it matter?

Not discernibly.

The vote of a tiny member of the United Nations is equal to that of a major power in the General Assembly. This is frequently discussed, pro and con, but diplomats here have all but forgotten a deal 23 years ago which could have given the United States multiple votes.

The agreement reached at Yalta in February 1945 in effect gave the Soviet Union three seats in the projected United Nations and pledged an equal number of votes to the United States— if desired.

Part of the pact was put into effect when the Soviet Ukraine and Byelorussia were invited without opposition to become founding members along with the Soviet Union.

The provision for three U.S. votes was kept secret at the time by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was never put into effect. No details were ever worked out as to how the United States would cast the three votes.

Although the U.N. membership of the Ukraine and Byelorussia was approved without objection, there is no certainty that the San Francisco conference would have endorsed multiple votes for the United States, if such a proposal had been presented.

The Ukraine and Byelorussia were proposed as independent countries which had played a leading role in the Allied victory over Germany. Even though their independence may have been questioned by many countries, there was an emotional factor in their favor.

Some high American officials involved in the agreement had their doubts about support for the U.S. part of the deal. They feared that presentation of a proposal for three U.S. votes might result in a rejection of the whole Yalta agreement.

On the basis of U.N. voting over the past two decades, it is doubtful whether two extra votes for the United States would have made any difference. A search of the records fails to disclose a single instance in which the votes of the Ukraine and Byelorussia changed the outcome of a U.N. decision.

In the first years of the United Nations, the presence of the two Soviet republics did give the Kremlin some moral support because they were the main part of the Soviet bloc, which consisted only of them and Poland. Their presence lost some of its significance when the Soviet bloc expanded to 10 members.

The Ukraine and Byelorussia have never played a major role here, even though they have sent two or three interesting personalities to the United Nations. Ike to Campaign For Birth Control

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower will go on the air next month to campaign for government action on birth control, action which he opposed while in the White House.

Planned Parenthood - world Population announced Wednesday, that Eisenhower, who shares with former President Harry S. Truman the chairmanship of the organization's honorary sponsors council, has recorded and filmed a one-minute message for radio and television. It will be broadcast in February in connection with a Planned Parenthood fund raising drive.

Eisenhower's message calls the population explosion "the world's most critical problem" and calls for government and private action to give all people "the clear human right of choosing the number of children they will have."

Eisenhower says that as president "I thought and said that birth control was not the business of our federal government.

"The facts changed my mind," he adds.

The former president says the population explosion is "smothering economic growth" in some areas and could threaten peace.

Mayor Urges Hard Surfaced Runway

CARUTHERSVILLE -- The runway at the Caruthersville airport will, by this summer, probably be one of the best sod runways that can be found in this part of the country. But, in order to attract more industry and serve the needs of the companies that are already here, a need for a hard surfaced runway is pressing.

Construction started on the extension of the runway at the airport around two years ago, and was finally completed a couple of months ago. When the extra length is opened, the runway will be 4,800 feet long. A sod runway is good for small aircraft, but not suitable for larger transport planes.

The airport covers 65 acres of land. More than 200 acres are included with the airport, golf course, and city park, which are all located in the same area. At this time, there are about 25 to 30 people using the Caruthersville airport, but with a surfaced runway, planes that have been using other area surfaced runways could move to Caruthersville.

Caruthersville Mayor B. F. Rogers reports that he has been working on plans for a hard surfaced runway for sometime now. "A hard surfaced runway would bring more trade and industry to Caruthersville," said Mayor Rogers.

Officials of the Federal Aviation Administration have, on several occasions, come to Caruthersville to inspect the airport facilities here. Mayor Rogers says that at this time, no form or application concerning a surfaced runway had been presented to Caruthersville, but city officials would know more about it this summer. "I have told them," said Mayor Rogers, "that we would probably be in the position this summer to talk on the matter."

Rogers pointed out that he was going to do this best to get a surfaced runway in Caruthersville. "We will have as good as sod runway as anyone," said Mayor Rogers, "but many seem to be in favor of a surfaced one." He also pointed out that the extended runway would be approved and opened as soon as the grass took roots and packed.

U.S. Spurned Chance For 3 U.N. Votes

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — A primer on voting strength at the United Nations might go something like this:

What power has three votes in the United Nations?

The Soviet Union.

What nation spurned a chance to have the same?

The United States.

Does it matter?

Not discernibly.

The vote of a tiny member of the United Nations is equal to that of a major power in the General Assembly. This is frequently discussed, pro and con, but diplomats here have all but forgotten a deal 23 years ago which could have given the United States multiple votes.

The agreement reached at Yalta in February 1945 in effect gave the Soviet Union three seats in the projected United Nations and pledged an equal number of votes to the United States— if desired.

Part of the pact was put into effect when the Soviet Ukraine and Byelorussia were invited without opposition to become founding members along with the Soviet Union.

The provision for three U.S. votes was kept secret at the time by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was never put into effect. No details were ever worked out as to how the United States would cast the three votes.

Although the U.N. membership of the Ukraine and Byelorussia was approved without objection, there is no certainty that the San Francisco conference would have endorsed multiple votes for the United States, if such a proposal had been presented.

The Ukraine and Byelorussia were proposed as independent countries which had played a leading role in the Allied victory over Germany. Even though their independence may have been questioned by many countries, there was an emotional factor in their favor.

Some high American officials involved in the agreement had their doubts about support for the U.S. part of the deal. They feared that presentation of a proposal for three U.S. votes might result in a rejection of the whole Yalta agreement.

On the basis of U.N. voting over the past two decades, it is doubtful whether two extra votes for the United States would have made any difference. A search of the records fails to disclose a single instance in which the votes of the Ukraine and Byelorussia changed the outcome of a U.N. decision.

In the first years of the United Nations, the presence of the two Soviet republics did give the Kremlin some moral support because they were the main part of the Soviet bloc, which consisted only of them and Poland. Their presence lost some of its significance when the Soviet bloc expanded to 10 members.

The Ukraine and Byelorussia have never played a major role here, even though they have sent two or three interesting personalities to the United Nations. The most colorful perhaps was Dmitri Manuilsky, Bolshevik leader and foreign minister of the Ukraine. He was elected chairman of the important Political Committee of the General Assembly in 1946.
